Redevelopment takes 'one giant step'

Superblock zoning variations approved by city council

'Z-14-73-PUD'—Superblock a reality after 7 years

by DOROTHY OLIVER

Des Plaines will have its Superblock

Downtown redevelopment took a major step closer to reality Monday night when the city council voted in favor of granting all zoning variations to build the $11 million shopping-mall office-complex in the heart of the business district.

"This is the first step taken around the Chicago metropolitan area that is truly significant and likely to result in a viable development program," project developer Jerome R. Gottlieb said yesterday.

No town in the metropolitan area has accomplished what Des Plaines has accomplished, Gottlieb said in the wake of the Superblock victory.

"Every town is concerned with the deterioration of their downtown area. They have studied it, set up commissions, booster clubs have been formed — but no one has done anything," he said. "They have wonderful drawings and plans but not much else."

GOTTLIEB SAID delays in the Des Plaines city council's approval of the zoning variations — which include increasing height regulations from 100 to 200 ft. and waving the $435,200 developer contribution for retail parking space — have pushed back their original time schedule.

"We hope to break ground sometime in early spring and the building should be ready two years after the start of construction," he said.

The planned two-story shopping mall will be topped by 10 stories of offices near Prairie and Lee streets on the south side of downtown Des Plaines. The city has agreed to build a multi-story garage on Ellinwood Street for shopper parking. The Des Plaines Mall Corp., comprised of Gottlieb and the Erickson and Steven's architectural firm, will rent parking spaces from the city for Superblock.

The project is part of total downtown redevelopment which has been ongoing in Des Plaines. Homes have been demolished to make way for a senior citizen housing project just south of the downtown area. City offices will be moving into a temporary city hall shortly and work will begin on a $2.2 million city hall-police building.

MOST OF THE peripheral downtown area has been rezoned for multiple family housing. Three and four-story apartment buildings and condominiums are commonplace.

"It's all a part of an old comprehensive plan we adopted which called for downtown redevelopment. It's nothing new. It's very carefully thought out. Superblock is proof that we are steadily moving ahead with our plans," said Mayor Herbert Behrel.

"Only Des Plaines has been able to get the cooperation of the people, the government, the property owners, the businessmen and the financial institutions," said Gottlieb. He added it was a lot easier for a developer to find a cornfield and build a shopping mall than to tackle a downtown area.

"Each land owner has a small parcel of land developed separately. They have a vested interest in a very small place," he said. "A developer needs a large parcel. The amount of work put into this project over a number of years is phenominal. We couldn't have done this without the tremendous amount of manhours which were put in before."

THE DES PLAINES Redevelopment Association, a group of local businessmen, made original studies on downtown redevelopment. They went on to form the Des Plaines Tomorrow Corp. which bought the needed land with loans from three local financial institutions. The banks are now in the process of buying the land from the Tomorrow Corp. so they can lease it to the Mall Corp.

"Des Plaines has taken the step," said Gottlieb. "Oher towns will probably wait and see what will happen here."

The vote was 10 to 5.

Superblock passed its major city council hurdle after a half-hour discussion and seven years of hard work.

Z-14-73-PUD was called to the attention of the aldermen late Monday night by City Clerk Eleanor Rohrbach. Ald. Ewald Swanson (6th) presided over the proceedings in the absence of Mayor Herbert Behrel.

Long-time downtown redevelopment backer Ald. Robert Hinde (4th) immediately moved for adoption of the planned unit development ordinance which would grant important zoning changes for the $11 million project.

Ald. Kenneth Kehe (2nd) seconded the motion — and the expected hassle over Superblock began.

About 100 onlookers packed the city hall chambers. All but 12 left after the vote was tallied.

ALD. SPENCER CHASE (3rd) began the low-key, mostly polite debate by stating he has always been in favor of downtown redevelopment but "there is a considerable question in my mind whether this is a correct proposal."

Chase, Ald. Carmen Sarlo (6th) and Ald. Gerald Meyer (7th) distributed about 7,000 questionnaires to residents last week asking opinions on the zoning variations up for council approval. The questions have come under attack by other aldermen and two local newspapers whose publishers are financially involved in Superblock, as being loaded, unfair, slanted, biased and irresponsible.

The three have consistently defended their survey as being conducted fairly — their attempt to find out what the people want.

As they yielded the floor from one to the other, the three read their anti-superblock percentages. "The answers of our constituents to the questions and their written comments give a clear picture of what they want," Chase said.

Two attempts — one by Chase, one by Meyer — to amend the ordinance, eliminating the height and parking variation, failed in 11 to 4 and 10 to 5 votes.

ALD. THOMAS KOPLOS (1st) abstained from voting, citing a possible conflict of interest. Koplos owns stock in both Des Plaines National and First National Banks — future owners of Superblock land.

The pro and con redevelopment debate ended abruptly when Ald. Alan Abrams (8th) said, "I think these three aldermen should be commended . . . But to try to emasculate this ordinance in an attempt to defeat it is really wrong. Let's face this issue directly — not in bits and pieces. Let's face the business at hand."

Swanson called the final vote. Chase, Sarlo, Meyer, Ald. Arthur Erbach (5th) and Ald. George Olen (2nd) voted no.

"What happened last night shows the difference between the professionals and the amateurs on the city council," said Mayor Herbert Behrel yesterday. Behrel did not attend the meeting due to his recent hospitalization for a suspected bleeding ulcer.

By 10:30 a.m. the mayor had been in contact with City Engineer Robert Bowen, and Comptroller Duane Blietz to get the city's end of the project rolling.

"We're going to move," he said.

WHILE THE Superblock developer is completing drawings, collecting bids and seeking building department approval of plans, the city will begin proceedings to vacate Center Street, straighten Prairie Avenue, and enter into a formal agreement to build a multi-level parking garage.

The city council has not heard the last of Superblock. Much that remains to be done will depend on council approval. Parking will remain the big issue, several aldermen have indicated.

Local man charged with 61 burglaries

A Park Ridge man has been charged by Cook County Sheriff's police with 61 burglaries in unincorporated Maine Township. The burglaries have taken place over a period of a year, according to police.

Dominic Capobianco, 18, will appear in Niles Branch of Cook County Circuit Court Aug. 14. He was arrested July 3 by an off-duty sheriff's officer who was responding to a burglary in progress call at the home of Joseph Singer, 9066 Church St.

Police said neighbors saw a man breaking into the house while Singer was at work and alerted police.

The officer, H. D. Allison said he saw Capobianco inside with an armload of jewelry and household items.

Under questioning by investigators later, Capobianco reportedly admitted to the July 3 break-in as well as 60 other such thefts in unincorporated Maine Township since last year.

Capobianco was later released on $7,500 bond pending his court appearance.

Cuts 'resource equalizer'

Walker slows school-aid formula

by WANDALYN RICE

Action this week by Gov. Daniel Walker on a new state school aid formula may extend the number of years required before the new formula fully takes effect, but does not change the basic funding plan.

Walker Monday signed H.B. 1484, called the "resource equalizer," which changes the way the state will distribute aid to local school districts. At the same time, the governor used his selective veto power to cut the funds for the bill by about 5 per cent to $900 million.

The fund cut, according to Jim Jepson, staff assistant to Democratic House leader Clyde Choate, will mean that school districts may not receive the full amount called for this year under the formula. State aid claims for school districts, he said, will be prorated to distribute the funds available.

UNDER THE RESOURCE equalizer formula, each school district will be guaranteed the amount of revenue it would get if it had a certain set assessed property valuation per pupil. The bill called for the plan to be adopted over a four-year period, with no school district being allowed more than a 25 per cent state aid increase in any one year. The cut in the funds this year may mean it will take more than four years for the formula to be phased in.

According to sponsors of the resource equalizer bill, nearly every school district in the state will receive substantial state aid increases under the new formula.

In other action Monday, Gov. Walker signed legislation providing funds for the state system of higher education and the state's junior colleges.

The funds for the junior college system provide for an increase in the state aid grants given colleges per student credit hour, according to Fred Wellman, executive director of the Illinois Junior College board. In addition, the governor's action provides for money for enrollment increases in the state junior colleges and for increased state funding for vocational education programs, Wellman said.

IN ADDITION TO his action on the state aid bills, the governor also made substantial reductions in appropriations for the state teacher retirement systems.

The Illinois General Assembly passed bills providing for a full state share of the retirement systems, which are funded through contributions from the state and from individual teachers. Walker said the state could not afford to fully fund the retirement systems this year.

The Illinois Education Association, state wide teacher bargaining group, said yesterday they would challenge the governor's right to cut the appropriations for the retirement funds in the Illinois Supreme Court.

Price rollback

Sears, 2 others move to meet U.S. guidelines

Sears Roebuck and Co. and two major Chicago meat suppliers began a price rollback this week to meet federal price-freeze guidelines.

The Sears price cutback will affect about 20 per cent of products listed in the new fall-winter catalog.

The meat firms — Esmark Inc., a holding firm for Swift & Co., and John Morreale & Co. — will recompute base prices charged to meat retailers and will reduce prices.

The cutbacks came after negotiations with the stabilization branch of the Internal Revenue Service, said Roger C. Beck, district director.

The Sears pricing could save customers $1.5 to $1.75 million, Beck estimated.

PRESIDENT NIXON ordered the price freeze June 13. The freeze sets highest purchase price at top cost between June 1 and June 8.

Sears printed its new catalog before Nixon ordered the freeze.

"Some prices — appliances for instance — are lower than in the previous catalog. Others may be pennies or even a few dollars more," a Sears spokesman said.

Because the catalogs reached some customers during the base period and some orders were placed, the prices top freeze limits, Beck said.

"We don't want to stimulate scare buying — or even lottery purchasing where you have a 1 in 5 chance of buying something cheaper," the Sears spokesman said.

"Prices in the catalog were determined according to Phase III guidelines which allowed increases," he said. "Many of these items have been purchased or ordered at increased cost."

THE VOLUNTARY Sears rollback will mean that customers who prepay purchases affected by the freeze from the fall catalog will receive "some sort of refund," he said. Other purchases "will automatically be charged at the lower price by the computer," the spokesman said.

Sears refused to list items affected by the rollback.

The meat firms used Phase III guidelines to determine freeze price, Beck said.

"Now it's a whole new ballgame," a spokesman for Esmark said. Phase III prices were calculated from 10 per cent of sales by meat firms. The new guidelines set ceilings based on total sales weight.

THE DIFFERENCE in the computation will be passed to wholesalers and meat buyers in the form of refunds. "In no way will it cause cutting of prices for the consumer," the meat spokesman said. "The dollar total is very small when compared to all meat sales."

"The savings could come to the consumer through the wholesaler who receives a rebate," Beck said.

IRS monitored about 40 meat firms in Chicago after the freeze announcement to check calculation of price ceilings. Target date for the rollback is July 27.

Elk Grove Village man fined $1,000

Ex-IRS agent pleads guilty on tax rap

Former Internal Revenue Service agent Louis A. Archbold pleaded guilty to two counts of income tax falsification in Federal District Court yesterday and was fined $1,000 by Judge James B. Parsons.

Archbold, 41, of 201 Victoria Ln., Elk Grove Village, also received a three-year jail sentence from Judge Parsons, but the judge suspended the sentence and instead placed Archbold on three years probation.

Assistant U. S. Atty. Theodore Scudder told the Herald yesterday that Archbold said in court he inflated deductions on the tax returns for two Spanish-speaking taxpayers because they were poor. Scudder quoted Archbold as saying that he was dismissed as an IRS Agent in 1971 because he "didn't drive a hard enough bargain with poor people."

A FORMER ORGANIZER of the Neighbors At Work organization in Elk Grove Village, Archbold worked with the organization to seek adequate housing for indigent Spanish-speaking families who lived in the area.

Scudder said the U. S. Attorney's office planned to drop charges against Archbold for eight other income tax returns he allegedly falsified for Spanish-speaking taxpayers.

Archbold yesterday first asked permission to merely plead no contention to the tax falsification charges, but then entered his two guilty pleas after his request was denied by Judge Parsons.

Scudder said the guilty pleas will effectively kill Archbold's request for reinstatement as an IRS Agent. Just before the federal charges were filed against Archbold last spring a civil service board had ruled Archbold should be reinstated as an IRS agent and should receive back pay.

THE TAX falsification charges relate to income tax returns Archbold prepared as part of a private tax preparation business he operated after his 1971 dismissal from the IRS.

Scudder said the judge also ordered Archbold to return to the federal government his credentials as an IRS Agent which he allegedly used in persuading the Spanish-speaking taxpayers to accept the income tax returns he prepared for them.

The two counts of criminal violations of the U.S. Tax code to which Archbold pleaded guilty involved returns prepared for Arturo and Elsa Hurtado, 529 W. Elk Grove Blvd., Elk Grove Village and Maria A. Rodriguez, 975 W. Dundee Rd., Wheeling.

SCUDDER SAID the return Archbold prepared for the Hurtados included inflated expense deductions such as $380 for real estate taxes when in fact the Hurtados paid no real estate taxes, a $250 deduction for professional magazines, a $600 hike in the allowable deduction for auto expenses and a $185 increase in the allowable deduction for parking and tolls.

On Maria Rodriguez' tax return Archbold included a $540 real estate tax deduction when she in fact rented her home, a $40 increase in deductions for tag day contributions, a $650 deduction for home mortgage insurance, a $485 deduction for auto accident damages when there was no accident, a $15 deduction for tax return preparations which she didn't pay and a $29 increase in a deduction for safety shoes.

THE GOVERNMENT alleged that on all 10 of the tax returns in the case Archbold had increased deductions by a total of $19,000.

Scudder told the Herald that Archbold apparently received no kickbacks from the families whose returns he falsified. Nine of the 10 families involved spoke no English, Scudder said.

The case had originally been scheduled to come to trial in the fall based on Archbold's original plea of innocent to the 10 counts. However, Archbold entered the guilty pleas yesterday after a pre-trial conference between his attorneys and government attorneys.

New travelers checks issued

BankAmerica Corp. recently unveiled a new travelers check with three globes on the face and an additional anti-fraud device.

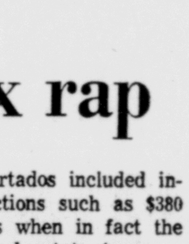

The redesigned check is blue and gold like the current version it replaces. Both will be sold and accepted worldwide until the new design is completely phased in.

"The graphics revision represents an attempt to streamline and modernize the check's appearance and give it an international look," said Ernest J. Young, president of BankAmerica Checque Corp., a new BankAmerica subsidiary which will market and manage the check. "The three globes on the check face are intended to illustrate its worldwide utility and acceptance," he said.

Young also noted that the check has several new anti-counterfeit and anti-fraud safeguards. Included is the placement of the countersignature line on the reverse side of the check instead of the front.

"This will make it considerably more difficult to forge a signature, and much easier for the recipient to compare signatures," he said.

Rats!

With proper rodent control, those long-tailed domestic pests don't stand a chance

by DOROTHY OLIVER

"Dear Resident:

"The Health Department has had several complaints in your neighborhood on RATS.

"Upon my investigation, I found this to be true. I have asked several of you to get together with me, at any time, day or night, in order to lay plans for a complete rat control program . . ."

Rats!

Panic.

But it does happen. Des Plaines — like every other community in every other county in every other state — has its share of long-tailed, disease-carrying, garbage-eating rats.

The Des Plaines River, various creeks and lakes, forest preserves, bird feeders, open garbage cans, torn plastic garbage bags are all contributing factors in maintaining a population of domestic rats.

Despite the rat-enticing habits of man, the city has managed to reduce the number of rodents and practically eliminate resident complaints through aggressive and constant rat control.

THE HEALTH department and public works department cooperate in a rat-baiting program near creek beds, the river and any other public property where rats may congregate.

Should a homeowner spot a rat, call and complain, an investigation is made and the Health Department's "rat letter" is sent to homes in the area.

"Rats could be considered a danger or a hazard in the slum areas of the city of Chicago, but here they're more of a nuisance than anything else," said Marvin Martin, city sanitarian.

"We've got them under control. There haven't been many complaints," he said.

The rat program has been going on for years, Martin said. Bait stations — square box-like ones and coned shape — are set near creeks and rivers. Poisoned grain is placed in the center of the traps and zap . . . no more rats.

"They go back to their rat holes and die. We know we've got the problem licked when they aren't sighted," Martin said. "We had a lot of complaints around the Des Plaines River. We went out there and counted 40 rats. After we baited and removed the source of their food we saw none."

MARTIN SAID the bait the city uses is safe for children and pets. Other animals won't go into a rat hole or the rat bait stations. "To my knowledge, no other type of animal has ever died from the rat baiting," he said.

In addition to the bait stations, rat holes are poisoned. Martin said they go out and look for the rat holes in rock piles and areas where ground meets cement.

"We plug up one of the entrances. They open it up and find the bait," he said. Zap . . . no more rats.

If a rat problem does exist, it is generally because people make it possible. "Rats are people-oriented. They like people food and people make it easy for them to exist," said Martin.

The well-meaning resident who places bread out for the squirrels or seed out for birds may also be inviting rats. The homeowner with uncovered garbage cans, or ripped plastic garbage bags is harboring a great food supply for the rodents.

THE "RAT LETTER" suggests:

- Starve rats by better sanitation and by protection of food supply.
- Store garbage in tightly covered metal containers.
- Store food in tightly covered containers of metal or glass.
- Keep laundry soap, candles, wax papers, etc. where rats cannot get at them.
- Keep garbage can area, storage area and grounds free of garbage.
- Store fruits and vegetables in refrigerator or in rat-proof room.
- Seal all holes rats use to enter buildings — basement walls and floors — with good cement or concrete. See that all doors and windows fit tight. Make all doors self-closing and outward-opening and see to it that they are kept closed.
- Tear out infested wooden basement floors and replace with concrete. Pile boards or lumber at least 18 inches above the ground. Remove old sheds and storage bins.
- Keep premises clean and free of accumulations of junk and debris.

"When we send the letters out, it usually gets people to clean up a little bit," Martin said.

All Saints mausoleum kept alive by council

by MIKE ZAREMBA

The city council didn't vote on the $15 million, 75-foot-high mausoleum at All Saints Cemetery, but they did extend their blessings.

The city council Monday night tabled the report by the municipal development committee for a 75-foot height variation for the mausoleum. City ordinance would allow a 35-foot height.

The two 7th ward aldermen, John Seitz and Gerald Meyer, fought against council approval of the variation saying it could set a precedent for other high-rise projects in the area.

The council previously denied the height variation in a 9 to 6 vote June 18 after Seitz and Meyer presented 21 petitions signed by 407 residents opposing the project.

CITY ATTY. Robert DiLeonardi suggested that rather than kill the project with a no vote the council might want to table the report — giving Catholic Cemeteries the opportunity to withdraw the height variation request and instead apply for a special use permit. The special use permit would not set the feared precedent, he said.

Homeowners of the 7th Ward had complained that mausoleum construction would start development of high-rise apartment buildings and cemetery officials have ample space to build a shorter, but longer mausoleum.

DiLeonardi said if the mausoleum is constructed under special use it would have less influence on the next zoning case down the line. "The mausoleum will have open space around it. This will give it less weight than a typical 75-foot apartment building."

"Under a special use permit particulars can be tied down," he added. The city could write in the different considerations it wants when drawing up the permit, DiLeonardi said.

"WE ARE GOING to look into the different possibilities and discuss the alternative proposals," city planner Mike Richardson said yesterday. He mentioned the possibility of creating an institutional zoning district like those used for hospitals and cemeteries. Richardson said his concern will be with "lessening the impact of any possibility of setting a precedent for high-rises."

"That's fine," said John Philbin, executive director of Catholic Cemeteries, after hearing about the recent council decision.

"We can work with a special ordinance so we don't set a precedent. The city will probably come to us and ask for our advice and counsel," Philbin said.

Mayor Herbert Behrel said he was "not surprised at all" about what happened at the council meeting. "I don't know why they (Catholic Cemeteries) didn't come to us for a special use permit in the first place."

"The special use will eliminate any fear of precedent setting. I've seen a building like this one. What could be better than a lovely mausoleum on the corner of River and Central roads?"

Two thefts reported by condo residents

Burglars stole more than $2,100 in cash, clothes and jewelry from two condominiums at 9814 Bianco Terr. in Des Plaines Monday, Cook County Sheriff's police said.

One burglarized resident, David Hansen told police the burglars stole $1,100 in jewels and sportclothes from his apartment while Stuart Rosen told police the burglars broke into his adjacent home and stole $120 in cash along with another $900 in assorted jewelry.

Police believe the burglaries are related.

Chicago man arrested on burglary charge

A Chicago man was arrested Saturday after police said he stole a bicycle belonging to a local resident.

Richard Santmeyer, 36, 3132 Morgan was stopped near First Avenue and Wolf Road by police who said his description matched that of a man reported seen taking a bicycle from the garage of the unidentified resident.

The bike, later identified by its owner as the one stolen was found in the trunk of Santmeyer's auto.

An open bottle of beer was also found in the car, police said.

Santmeyer was charged with burglary, possession of burglary tools, driving with an expired license and having open liquor in his car.

He was released on bond and has been scheduled to appear in Des Plaines branch of Cook County Circuit Court Aug. 30.

HIS FORM is as good as the weather. This youthful Sox fan takes a healthy swing into summer as the sun finally breaks through.

Bomb explodes in parked car; no explanation

A black powder bomb exploded inside a car parked in a Schaumburg residential area early yesterday morning causing heavy damage to the vehicle.

While there were no injuries in the incident, the windows in the car were blown out and all four doors were sprung open.

Russel O. Lobaugh, of 609 Lilly Ct., Schaumburg, said he had no explanation as to why his car was bombed.

"We are searching for a who or why to help us explain this thing," he added.

SCHAUMBURG police chief Martin Conroy said the bomb appeared to be a fuse-type and not connected to a clock or the ignition system of the car. He added this was the first such incident ever reported in the village.

Police estimated the explosion occurred at 1:30 a.m., but neither Lobaugh nor his neighbors noticed the car until about 7 a.m.

Lobaugh said one of his sons noticed the damage as he was preparing to go to school. A neighbor told police that he noticed the car while he was driving to work.

Other neighbors told police they heard what sounded like a firecracker exploding during the night, but did not investigate the noise.

LOBAUGH SAID several members of his family also heard the noise, but thought that their cat might have knocked something over.

"I slept right through the whole thing," he added.

Police have sent several bomb fragments to the Chicago Police Department Crime Lab for analysis.

Conroy said investigators, including Detectives Howard Winklehake and James Kuzel, are working on several leads in the case.

He offered no additional explanation for the incident.

Lobaugh said the dashboard and interior of the car, a 1965 Pontiac, had also been damaged in the blast.

Hot-lunch plan rejected for this year

by FRED GACA

The Elk Grove Township Dist. 59 school board has rejected any type of district-sponsored hot lunch program for the coming school year.

The board, at Monday's meeting, ordered the lunch program committee to make recommendations to improve the present, independent program at each school. The recommendations will be considered by the board's policy committee.

Gerald Smiley, chairman of the lunch committee, said Tuesday that the board took no real action because the committee did not present any recommendation on a district-sponsored lunch program.

THE CURRENT interest in a district hot lunch program was sparked by parents organizations from two Des Plaines schools. The neighboring River Trails School Dist. 26, which has a hot lunch program, has extra facilities and could provide a food service to the two Des Plaines schools.

The lunch committee studied the feasibility of a "pilot program" for the two schools, with a possible district-wide expansion at a later date.

Smiley said there was no rush on developing a hot lunch program. "Sure the kids would like it, but it may not be feasible. It is open to many questions."

On Monday, Smiley gave the findings of his committee to the board. They listed only the advantages and disadvantages of a hot lunch program, without recommendation.

THE ADVANTAGES were:

- A district program would eliminate the variety of programs now used by different schools.
- Parent organizations, which sponsor the programs at the individual schools, may be violating Internal Revenue Service laws by operating the programs. There would be no problem with a district program.

Among the disadvantages were:

- No great interest to change because the present programs are working.
- Principals at the schools are not willing to take on the responsibility for the program.
- Some of the parent organizations use profits from the lunch program for school activities. A district program would eliminate such profit.

According to Smiley, most of the neighboring school districts have some type of lunch program, but Dist. 59 has traditionally avoided one.

"Many, many years ago, the board decided that going home for lunch was part of the educational program. The kids would go home and the parents would be there to accept them," said Smiley.

DEVELOPING a program would also be a problem because most of the district's schools have no kitchens or lunchrooms.

Smiley said that when the district was going through its explosive growth period during the 1960s, the board was forced to decide between learning centers at each school or lunch rooms — there was not enough money for both. The board decided on learning centers.

"A hot lunch program would encourage more kids to stay at school. Some schools are already forced to use classrooms for lunch," said Smiley.

Council OKs building occupancy

The Sears 'football game' finally ends

by MIKE ZAREMBA

It looks like the political football game is over.

A quarterback finally called the play on the renovated Sears building — which was being passed back and forth between the city council and Building Comr. Al Prickett for the last two weeks.

The quarterback, Ald. Ewald Swanson (6th), said the council should do something about the Sears building controversy.

THE CITY COUNCIL, after a few fumbles, voted Monday night to have Prickett — "when it's proper" — re-issue a temporary occupancy permit for the building located at the corner of Pearson and Miner streets.

Before the game ended, there was some debate on why the Stewardi Dress Shop was allowed to operate a business in the building, during the last week, without an occupancy permit.

The city council, July 2, voted to rescind Prickett's original temporary permit because of 30 existing building code violations. Aldermen said the building, which will also be the new headquarters for the temporary city hall, was unsafe with existing violations.

Prickett disagreed with the aldermen, claiming the building in his judgment was safe and that the violations were being repaired.

THE STEWARDI Dress Shop moved in while the first permit was in effect. After the permit was rescinded, Stewardi remained in the building and opened for business July.

"He shouldn't have been allowed to open his door for business," Ald. Carmen Sarlo (6th) said.

Sarlo asked for a legal opinion from City Atty. Robert DiLeonardi at the council meeting Monday night.

"The answer is a technical one. The business should not have been allowed to operate, but I don't see it as a technical problem now, but a practical one," DiLeonardi said.

DiLeonardi said "serious consideration" should be made since the repair work on the building is "so close" to completion.

"Now in the 11th hour, it would be foolish to take action to remove everyone from the building. I'm not saying this action should not have been taken two weeks ago."

He said he was unaware that anyone was operating a business, until it was brought to his attenion earlier this week.

Sarlo said he doesn't want to "see this happen again" and if administrators are unavailable or on vacation, the responsibility should not have to come back to the council.

PRICKETT HAD said he would not take action until he was directed by the city council, since they had decided to rescind the permit he issued.

Mayor Herbert Behrel said, at a press conference yesterday, "I think the council acted improperly in voting two weeks ago." Behrel criticized the report of 30 different violations listed in a letter sent to the aldermen.

The report didn't show what section of the code was violated or whether a violation was under the fire or building code, Behrel said.

"This is the first time I've ever seen a report like this," Behrel said. He said it was unusual for a report to be made on a city project and he agreed with Prickett's opinion that the building was safe.

Simple eccentricity

A return to Walden Pond shows that Thoreau's image casts an unforgettable reflection

by TOM WELLMAN

CONCORD, Mass. — He was born in a New England town where his neighbors were literary and philosophical giants, but today his writings and his ideas have eclipsed all of them.

He lived for over a year in a one-room cabin close by Walden Pond — an act which marked him as an oddball and an eccentric in the community.

Against the genteel traditions of the time, he went to jail for refusing to pay a poll tax. Perhaps to avoid the blot on the family's name, a relative paid the tax for him.

He wrote a handful of books about nature, all of which were dismal financial failures. He died in 1862, unheralded in his native Concord.

Later, critics termed him a stoic, a moralizer, an arsonist, an egoist, a father-hater, a banal writer, an anarchist, a nature writer, a failed scientist, a mystic "in the best sense of the word" and a friendly and congenial man.

HIS NAME IS Henry David Thoreau and every summer since 1941, this man's memory has been honored as his faithful disciples and students have gathered in sturdy Concord, Mass., to recall the man and the works of his life.

They gather in the First Parish Meetinghouse, an imposing white New England church, to hear Thoreau eulogized and interpreted, to total up the past work of the Thoreau Society, to break bread together, to become reacquainted with one another and to trudge the wooded paths Thoreau followed more than 100 years ago.

This past weekend, almost to the day of the anniversary of his birth, it was no different. About 150 persons — most of whom drive to Concord every July — heard anthropologist Loren Eiseley probe Thoreau's philosophy, ate a roast beef lunch off paper plates in the sweltering basement of the church and walked along shaded paths in the Great Meadows National Wildlife Refuge near Concord.

Those who come are believers who accept the works and legends about Thoreau with intense belief but also with scholarly interest. And they are accepting and honoring the man at a moment in history when Henry David Thoreau has become a highly visible American literary and cultural hero.

WALDEN, HIS study of life away from the society of man, has been translated into virtually every world language. Once regarded as nothing beyond a simple nature study, its philosophy of "simplify, simplify, simplify!" is read and reread by students and city dwellers seeking that simple life.

Beyond Walden and other works dealing with nature is an essay "Civil Disobedience," regarded today as a source of belief for Mahatama Gandhi and Dr. Martin Luther King Jr. The recorder of the wonders of nature is now to be regarded by some as the father of dissent, of upheavel and of social change in the modern world.

Today there is a Walden in Schaumburg, Ill., and a Walden site on the moon. There are Walden eyeglasses and a New Yorker cartoonist pokes gentle fun at it all by showing a "Thoreauburger" stand in the woods. The man, his pond and his ideas now live on Madison Avenue as well as in Concord.

YET, AS THOREAU'S fame increases around the world, the Thoreau Society is a clear pool of serenity, carrying on in an orderly manner the propagation of interest — and protection — of the man and his works.

On Saturday, as the current Thoreau Society president gavels the annual meeting to order (he uses a gavel made from the door of a Thoreau home), Walter Harding, a man largely responsible for the orderliness and serenity-watches.

Harding, an affable and greying man, helped found the Society 32 years ago. He is the academician entrusted with preserving the man's literary history, and he's secretary-treasurer of the Society.

Near him is a "digger" — Rowland Robbins, an archeaologist who excavated the original cabin site at Walden in 1945. Robbins is a vivaciously friendly man who slaps your back with a physical exuberance uncharacteristic of the society.

There is also in the audience a radio copywriter from Reading, Pa., a high school teacher from Norristown, Pa., and an American Indian who is a landscape architect in the Concord area. They are all in their 30s — an age that contrasts sharply with the grey and white hair that dots the audience.

And most of the members are from the New England area. It is an easy ride, for most, to Concord; a leisurely ride in an air-conditioned comfortable car to this seat of the American revolution.

A REQUIRED STOP for followers of the Concord writer Henry David Thoreau is his grave on Author's Ridge in Sleepy Hollow Cemetery. He is buried near Ralph Waldo Emerson, Louisa May Alcott and Nathaniel Hawthorne.

BEFORE THE 150 persons can hear again about Thoreau, they must hear about the business of the society. Harding reads the treasurer's report, and the society's made a modest sum of money during the past 12 months. A fund is established to honor a member who died this spring; it provides $1,000 to purchase rare Thoreau manuscripts "on the market."

There is, however, a basic and vital philosophical decision facing the society at this year's meeting. The society enjoys a special tax-exempt status, but a motion is on the floor to determine whether that status shall continue or whether the society shall take political stands and thus lose this protection.

The tax deduction is "incidental," says Pres. Frederick McGill, and he urges acceptance of the motion to keep the society as it is. Thoreau would have wished the group to mind its own business, to speak out its own minds and to let the nieghbors speak for themselves, he says.

A woman counters, "We're doing his memory a disservice" by accepting this motion, for rejection of it would allow the society to take a stand on amnesty. "We know how Thoreau stood on this issue," she dclares.

The motion is overwhelmingly approved, however, and the society's business meeting is over. Now, the scholarly and reserved Eiseley reads from his text delving into the philosophical intricacies of "The Sun and Eye: Thoreau's Vision of the Natural World." (Later, a woman at lunch whispers, "I came to hear him. Don't tell anybody, but I HATE Thoreau."

EISELEY'S PAPER draws loud vigorous applause. President McGill follows with a short talk about an imagined dialogue with Thoreau's ghost. "Tell them up there in Concord they need more philosophers," Thoreau wuld have said.

In the church basement, 45 minutes later, it is no cooler, and the 150 persons gathered at the long tables have splotches of sweat forming on their clothing. Aproned and sweating women bring in the fare, which is beef, carrots and peas, mashed potatos and a cherry desert. A tiny stage holds the head tables; it's an 1890s church social in 1973.

Following the lunch, there are Thoreau's steps to be retraced. A tour leaves for Copan, a nature walk in which 40 or 50 persons trudge two miles through 85 degree heat along a well-worn footpath. Otherwise, there's a panel discussion on "Thoreauvians and the Amnesty Issue."

There is time, too, for Walden Pond. When Thoreau's cabin faced it, there were few 30 to 40-foot-high trees that now enclose the site. Thoreau could see almost back to the road, it is said.

Today, the pine trees cool the tourists as they walk towards the cairn where the cabin stood. Four stone markers surround the site and a bronze plaque identifies the location. Beyond, Walden Pond is glass-like in the sunlight.

TO THE PERENNIAL horror of many Thoreauvians, there is a beach hidden beyond the bend of the pond, a beach crowded on hot July afternoons with persons and with picnic rubbish. Of special concern to the Thoreau followers are those bathers and "hippies," as they call them, who wander too far around the lake, threatening to desecrate the site with litter and with indiscriminate swimming near the cabin.

Today, a frog croaks in the afternoon's falling sunshine, near a shallow lagoon. Several hundred feet away and shielded by the trees, cars slow in traffic near the Walden Breezes trailer Court. The world is very near today to Thoreau's pond.

Later, as night falls over the Massachusetts woods, the Boston and Maine railroad's commuter trains pass near Walden Pond and the Thoreau Lyceum, a bookstore and historical center for Thoreau's followers. Out back there's a wood cabin tailored faithfully after the Walden cabin.

And, in the grass and seated at long tables are about 50 members of the Society. They are chatting while eating box lunches of cold fried chicken, potato salad and chocolate chip cookies.

BACK IN TOWN, the antique and gift shops with the key chains and ash trays bearing the likeness of Revolutionary War heroes are closing. Oddly, there are few Thoreau trinkets in this town; there's a blase attitude towards Thoreau. Perhaps there is much other history to attend to.

Later in the evening, the Thoreau meeting ends with an NET-produced film called the "The Captain of a Huckleberry Party" and a slide show which honors the faithful member who died earlier this year.

The gavel's passed to a new president, and McGill concludes, "You can go home now." Once again, this time in 1973, Thoreau day has been completed.

There's no simple, isolated reason why these persons drawn together every year to honor this American writer. "To read Walden is like coming home," a woman says, and Robbins, the archeologist, is asked why so many believe so strongly in this Concord writer:

"Lots of people are hooked on the Bible, aren't they?" he says.

ALMOST EVERYONE, it seems, asserts faith that they will return next year and that the society will remain constant in a changing world. "We're going to be doing the same thing in 20 years," a woman says but she adds that the woman says but she adds that the society will continue to adapt itself to Thoreau's increasing popularity.

Indeed, most will return 1974, 1975 and 1075, which Thoreauvians nervously remember is the nation's 200th birthday. The handshakes of friendship will be repeated, new and old legends about Thoreau will be discussed in the same overheated church and the Thoreauvians will continue to speculate just what WOULD Thoreau have done today if faced by any given set of circumstances.

Outside, beyond the ring of lights in Concord's downtown, Thoreau lies in Sleepy Hollow Cemetery. The man whom Eiseley called a "serene radical" is undisturbed by those who honor and consider him. Only through his books — and in the imaginations of those who believe in him — does he speak with his friends.

Some criticisms become so ingrained in people's minds they go on forever.

For example, you can always charge that newspapers only print bad news and no matter what the truth is people will nod in agreement.

And, when you want to criticize schools, you can always complain that there are huge wastes when school buildings stand empty all summer. Your listeners will seldom question that, because it's been accepted as true for so long.

THE ONLY PROBLEM is — it's getting less and less true, particularly in this area. During the past few years school districts have gone to tuition free summer schools and the number of students using the buildings during the summer, both in elementary and high schools, has increased.

This summer 7,049 students are registered for the first semester of High School Dist. 214's summer school program and 2,600 students were expected in the High School Dist. 211 summer school program.

Since about 18,000 students attend Dist. 214 schools during the regular school year and about 9,000 attend Dist. 211 schools, the summer school figures mean that about 44 per cent of the Dist. 214 students and 28 per cent of the Dist. 211 students are going to summer school.

LOOKING AT those numbers, you can conclude the schools are "unused" all summer?

Sure, if there was an official 12-month school year in any of the school districts, those percentages of studengs going to school in the summer would go up. In addition, the school districts would probably have to spend the money to air-condition all their buildings. Right now, you see, students are in the sometimes hot buildings voluntarily. If they were forced to suffer through the summer, the hue and cry would be deafening.

In fact, most of the school districts in this area have pretty respectable summer school programs — with the numbers of students attending making it a far cry from the days when only people who were flunking went to summer school.

Enough high school students these days are going to summer school to cause still another problem for school officials — more and more students are graduating early, before they've finished the normal four years.

MOST SCHOOL officials try to discourage the practice, believing that it is good for the students to stay in school for the full four years, but the trend has continued.

The problem is one that can't be taken lightly. Recently some High School Dist. 214 board members suggested the district ought to start providing graduating ceremonies in January at all schools for students who graduate early.

Supt. Edward Gilbert replied that, since the district's policy was not to encourage early graduation, it might be inconsistent to provide graduation ceremonies.

How long school officials will be able to officially discourage early graduation is an open question. It's becoming apparent that for some students at least, the early graduation from high school is a good alternative, allowing them to start college early, work and earn extra money or just plain take some time off.

Who knows, maybe eventually the old criticism that schools aren't used all summer will be replaced by a new one — when people start asking why kids don't stay in school for four years instead of going to summer school and getting out early.

Chesney set to step down

Another Democratic township committeeman, Chester Chesney of Elk Grove Township, soon will announce his resignation.

James L. McCabe, Wheeling Township Democratic committeeman, announced last week that he will step aside from his post when a successor is named by his precinct captains.

Chesney said yesterday that he will formally announce his resignation in September, as he nears the end of his third four-year term as committeeman.

A long-time precinct committeeman in Chicago and one-term U.S. congressman, former Chicago Bears football player Chesney said, "It's time to get some new faces into the leadership."

HE ADDED that he did not feel that someone else will cause any disruption in the township organization, though he speculated there could well be a contest for the job in the primary elections next spring.

Chesney said he saw a number of possible contenders for the job and speculated that whoever is appointed to succeed him for the remainder of his term in the fall might face one or more challengers next spring.

Any possible contest, he said, would spring from ambition for political advancement by two or more members of the Elk Grove organization, but he predicted that such a contest would be "a friendly one" with no damaging effects on organization unity.

Among the obvious candidates for the job is William Rose, proprietor of the Maitre d' Restaurant in Elk Grove Village, and the 3rd District Democratic candidate for the state Senate in 1972.

Ross said yesterday he definitely would like to take over Chesney's post and will seek Chesney's support for the appointment.

PRESS AIDES to Gov. Daniel Walker have taken mild exception to some of the reportage of the governor's announcement of plans for an Interstate highway spanning the Chicago area from Waukegan to Park Ridge.

They feel two points were somewhat misconstrued by a number of reporters, including this one.

Most stories about the governor's announcement that the long-planned highway linking suburban areas with other expressways and providing a high-speed bypass of Chicago incorporated criticism by others that the road was not "new."

A press staffer pointed out that Walker noted specifically in his announcement that most of the planning and public hearings necessary for the construction had been completed before he took office, so that the plan could be carried forth immediately.

He did, indeed, and this reporter and others overlooked that point in their reports. The difference, the aide reminded, is that the road has been given Interstate designation, providing for greater federal financing.

THE OTHER exception to the reports was that the new highway was widely cited as Walker's alternative to the Crosstown Expressway. The aide pointed out that Walker has always opposed the Crosstown and does not consider the "beltline" expressway through the suburbs "an alternative."

With or without the suburban expressway, the governor's office said, Walker still considers completion of the Crosstown unacceptable in terms of the thousands of families whose homes would need to be razed.

The "alternative" interpretation, however, was a natural one, taken in most newspapers, due to Walker's direct comparison with the costs and the number of persons to be displaced by each road plan, and by his claim that the new road would ease pressure on city expressways, negating any need for completion of the Crosstown.

Some industries to get exemptions from Phase IV

WASHINGTON (UPI) — A few industries likely will get an immediate exemption from Phase IV economic controls, to be announced today, but the relief will come too late for 43 companies that were forced to close by the price freeze.

The companies that have shut down to avoid losing money during the current freeze include 11 big meat-packing plants with annual sales of more than $50 million. The council said pork producers were especially hard hit by the freeze and earlier meat price ceiling restrictions.

Director John T. Dunlop of the Cost of Living Council (CLC) told reporters Phase IV — the "fairly tough" stabilization program — will include a procedure for exempting companies and industries that can prove they are not contributing significantly to the nation's inflationary problem.

It would give the council a means of gradually phasing out wage-price controls on much of the economy while concentrating on industries where price and wage increases have been excessive.

Asked if some industries would get an exemption at the outset of Phase IV, Dunlop replied: "It's conceivable . . . but not many."

DUNLOP ALSO declined to speculate how long Phase IV would last. "It's quite unlikely that anyone would put a date on these matters," he said.

Despite the hardships of the freeze — which have forced livestock producers to destroy breeding stock and have encouraged some vegetable and fruit growers to bypass middlemen and sell directly to retailers as a way of beating ceiling price rules — council officials said they had found no evidence of price gouging.

Reflecting on the effects of the freeze, which began June 13, Dunlop said he has been surprised and disturbed by the varied reaction of Americans to the latest set of controls. Farmers have been angry but consumers generally view the freeze as a blessing.

SEVERAL KEY administration officials and advisers in recent days have urged a quick end to all controls, countering arguments of liberal economists who advocate some sort of continuing government oversight of wage-price behavior.

On this issue, Dunlop said he does not advocate permanent controls. But he said economic stabilization had been helpful at certain periods.

For the present, Dunlop said, "we intend to put in place a fairly tough Phase IV program" while at the same time "developing a credible procedure" for the company or industry that says "I want out."

Before the controls are ended, Dunlop said, conditions should be ripe for lifting both wage and price restrictions at once.

Introducing the end of the jam-up!

For years, a car pool was the way to solve a temporary transportation crisis. Today, it's a necessity!

Because only by reducing the total number of cars on Chicagoland expressways and streets each day, can we truly ease our traffic congestion headaches . . . the problem of too few parking spaces . . . the spiralling costs of getting to and from work . . . the gasoline shortage . . . to say nothing of our air pollution crisis!

Recent traffic counts show that from 75 to 90% of all cars carry only the driver . . . Obviously—if each were to share 1, 2, 3 or even 4 seats, a like number of cars could be eliminated.

Car Pools Can Be Fun

Let us help you form your own personally selected car pool. Simply by sharing a few empty seats, driving could again be a pleasure and our highways could once again be open.

Private schools on the increase in U.S.

Editors Note: This special report examines the astonishing proliferation of private schools in the United States, and the reasons therefore.

by VERNON SCOTT
UPI Senior Editor

In a land that prides itself on a free educational system, one of every 10 American school children today attends a private school.

There are 51 million pupils in classes from kindergarten through the 12th grade in the United States. Almost one-fourth of the population.

More than 5 million of them are paying for their birthright.

Private or independent schools are undergoing change and tremendous growth in numbers — 180 new private schools opened in California alone in the past year and a half. This despite the diminishing number of school-age children and the subsiding baby boom.

There are fewer school-age children today than 10 years ago but, curiously, the number of nonpublic schools — aside from Roman Catholic institutions — has increased by 66 per cent in the past decade.

THE TREND WOULD appear to reflect a growing indictment of our public school systems. There are fewer children in private schools than 10 years ago, but this is because of the decrease in population growth and because Catholic school enrollment has declined by 17 per cent in the same period as more and more parochial schools — due mainly to economics — close their doors.

Catholic students account for some two-thirds of nonpublic school enrollment, but the percentage has been dropping steadily as costs of private education rise and the number of priests, brothers and nuns available for teaching declines.

Catholic schools also are suffering from a continuing public school malady — overcrowded classrooms.

The student-teacher ratio is a prime reason for the expanding independent school movement in almost every section of the country. Parents increasingly want more individual attention for their offspring.

In many schools the student-teacher ratio is as much as 35-1. Often higher. Private schools bring that figure down to as low as 5-1, although the average, according to the California Association of Independent Schools, is nearer 9-1.

ALONG WITH THE dramatic decline in Catholic schools nationwide, military schools have been on the wane since Vietnam.

Item: "The once burgeoning California Military school field took another step toward oblivion today with the announcement that Harding Military Academy, Glendora, Calif., will be sold at auction April 4." From an auctioneer's announcement this year.

Harding was the sixth California military school to close in the last five years.

"The story is about the same in the rest of the country," said a spokesman for Indiana's famed Culver Military Academy which has suffered a slipping enrollment.

"We credit the falling enrollment to a reaction to the authority in boarding schools and the military in general, along with the increase of costs." He guessed there were only 40-45 military schools remaining in the United States.

The greatest number of private schools is found in the North Atlantic area of the country with 23 per cent, including parochial schools. But the greatest gain in the past decade is in the Southeast where independent schools skyrocketed 242 per cent since busing became an issue and southern public schools were forced to integrate.

NEWTON K. CHASE of the California Department of Education said, "Some private schools are founded for the wrong reasons. But others are started because of the growing crime rate."

Item: "Teachers returned to their duties Wednesday at Compton's Whaley Junior High School after refusing to report for work for two consecutive days because of recent campus disturbances." From the Los Angeles Times, April 5, 1973.

Security officers patrolled halls in the Compton school, a not uncommon manifestation in other parts of the country including New York, where crimes of drug pushing, vandalism, shootings and rape take place on school grounds.

"More important than fear or dismay in a parent's decision to send a child to private school is the quality of education," Chase said. "Independent schools range from ultra-progressive to very conservative.

"The only law in California governing private or alternative schools is that they must register each year with the State Superintendent of Public Instruction."

It is surprisingly simple to start a private school in any state.

IN ALMOST EVERY case the new school need only register its intent, location and provide names of the founders, along with assurances the school will be nonprofit.

New York, which leads the nation with 753,000 private school students, enforces specific standards on proposed private schools, requiring them to meet building codes, fire standards, and have an educational program equivalent to the public schools.

New York also presents a dramatic picture of the decline in the number of Catholic students attending parochial schools. In 1965 there were approximately 800,000 enrollments. In 1972 the figure was 588,000. The loss was 26.24 per cent or a decline of 212,000 in seven years.

J. Alan Davitt, executive secretary, New York State Council of Catholic School Superintendents, says the economic crunch is principally responsible for the Catholic school problem.

"Also there is the whole question of changing tastes," he said. "Families are no longer under pain of going to that other place if their children don't go to Catholic schools. There's more individual responsibility for that determination. And for someone whose pocketbook is feeling the crunch, this is where the bite comes."

PRIVATE SCHOOLS, however, distinguish between parochial schools — listing Catholic schools separately from other church-affiliated institutions and nonaffiliated schools.

The growth statistics gathered by the Department of Health, Education and Welfare are interesting.

While Catholic schools dropped in number of students by 17 per cent in the nation, other affiliated schools jumped by 48.9 per cent and, astonishingly, by 92.9 per cent of nonaffiliated schools in the past 10 years.

What does an independent school offer that the public schools do not?

One answer comes from The Buckley School in Los Angeles, Calif.

It was founded in 1933 by Dr. Isabelle P. Buckley, author of the book, "College Begins at Two," as a preschool and kindergarten. Today the school has a new modern campus for 750 students from nursery (2 year olds) to the 12th grade.

"The difference is educational philosophy," Dr. Buckley said. "Our motto is 'Self-expression through self-discipline."

"Good teachers want to teach in an environment of order and courtesy. Academically if students can't keep up they are tutored or must leave. Our school is not geared to the slowest learners."

THE BUCKLEY SCHOOL has been integrated for more than 20 years with blacks, Latins and Orientals enrolled. The faculty is international with teachers of Chinese, Filipino, French, Armenian, Greek, Russian and Turkish backgrounds.

"Behavioral discipline and character training is as important as the academic subjects," Dr. Buckley said.

"Private schools will continue to grow because public schools are poor. So many teachers came from Freudian concepts taught at the University of Chicago and Columbia that studenst are now paying the price.

"I think many parents are sending their children to independent schools in search for moral values. We endorse four aspects at our school: spiritual growth, academic fulfillment, emotional release and physical coordination."

Unlike many schools, public and private, Buckley's curriculum stresses mathematics, languages, and homework as early as the first grade. Latin is offered all high school students.

Sara Rugg, executive secretary of the California Association of Independent Schools, said private schools are a tradition in the East and a relatively new, but fast-growing phenomenon in the West.

"THE PUBLIC school system grew out of private schools in New England," she said. "Here in the West the reverse is true.

"There is more respect for private education in the East. But attitudes are changing in other parts of the country. People are sending children to private schools for a stronger academic program.

"Many families are fighting permissiveness. They want discipline, control and intellectual exchange for their children. Private schools provide a strong liberal arts education as opposed to vocational or technical training."

The California Association of Independent Schools (CAIF) represents 61 independent schools and is located in Santa Barbara.

Research for these schools shows that tuition varies from $600 -$1,450 per year for kindergarten and $1,325-$1,950 for high schools per annum. Boarding schools average from $2,800-$4,000 annually.

Another reason for the increasing number of independent schools is the great number of graduates who score sufficiently high in college board examinations to allow them their choice of higher education.

As for faculties in private schools, Dr. Nicolas Karazissis, a Buckley School principal, said, "In many cases public school teachers earn more money and have the protection of pension plans. But in big city schools a teacher feels he should enter his classes with a whip and a chair to maintain order — but not teach — for an hour at a time."

HIGH SCHOOLS generally lag behind elementary and junior high schools in number throughout the United States.

The sixth grade, for example, represented 11.8 per cent of private school students while the 11th grade accounted for 8.3 per cent.

The general consensus among many educators and independent school associations is that public schools in various areas of the country are not doing as effective a job of educating children as they should. There are exceptions, of course.

In addition to educational shortcomings, by and large the feeling is that drugs, crime and permissiveness are driving many families — especially in large cities — away from public institutions of learning to the private sector.

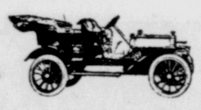

Busing and integration have been a factor in the growth of independent schools in the South and to a lesser degree in those cities in other parts of the country where desegregation has been ordered.

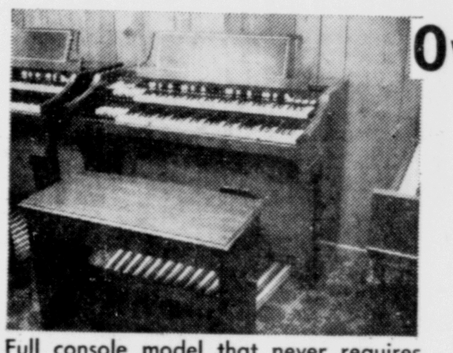

Boarding schools, military academies and parochial schools are on the wane for the same reasons in some cases, and for vastly different ones in others. But economics is a major factor in all.

It remains significant that more and more Americans are willing to pay tuition fees to private schools while continuing to pay taxes for public education.

Let's open up transit talks

In the regrettable political atmosphere in which the most powerful governmental figures in Illinois have immersed the crucial question of mass transportation, there is one maneuver which is worthy of praise.

Gov. Daniel Walker has challenged the other protagonists in this battle to state publicly their solutions for the question of mass transit in the six-county metropolitan area before there is any high-level meeting between them to arrive at a compromise.

Walker's suggestion came in response to a proposal by Republican Speaker of the House W. Robert Blair that the governor meet with him, Senate President William C. Harris and Chicago Mayor Richard J. Daley so that they could work out a plan which could be sold to the General Assembly in October.

We endorse the idea of such a meeting, because it is probably inevitable that some accord be reached between those four before any workable mass transit program can be enacted.

However, there is great merit in the governor's proposal that all the alternatives be laid out in public so that the people can know what alternatives are going to be discussed, presumably behind a closed door.

Such "legislative conferences" are a familiar tool to Speaker Blair, who invariably attacks all complex matters in the General Assembly by going into private huddles with Republican President Harris and their Democratic counterparts, Sen. Cecil Partee, D-Chicago, and Rep. Clyde Choate, D-Anna. The greatest number of major legislative decisions under Blair's speakership have been made in such conferences, while members of the legislature cool their heels awaiting their marching orders from the leadership.

Seldom do the majority of members know what the legislature is going to do on the critical issues until the word comes out of the conference in the speaker's chambers.

And when the deal falls through, the elected representatives of the people are left to draw their own conclusions about who reneged on what, or who proposed what alternative, or what was traded behind the closed door.

Mr. Blair now proposes that the same tactic be employed in hashing out the mass transit issue, perhaps because he has no desire for the voters to know what he is willing to trade on the issue.

We support Gov. Walker's demand that all the cards be laid out on the table and we anxiously await the unveiling of his plan, which he has promised in the near future.

Store thieves

Consumers who think high prices these days amount to robbery are closer to the truth than they may think.

Theft actually adds between 15 and 30 per cent to the cost of every article purchased in retail outlets, merchandisers estimate.

The thefts come in two forms — shoplifting and pilfering. And the latter, theft by a firm's own employes, is by far the most prevalent and costly. In one investigation of massive inventory losses in a major department store chain, old-fashioned shoplifters accounted for only 25 per cent. The rest of the chain's losses were at the hands of its own employes.

Since department stores are not organized as philanthropic institutions, the bill for thefts is not absorbed but is passed along to customers. An expert in the field, Guardsmark, Inc., a major private security service, estimates the bill, the total annual loss through employe pilfering, at a minimum $5 billion and probably closer to $15 billion.

While occasional, and usually petty, pilfering is widespread, only a small percentage of employes — estimated at 7 to 8 per cent—steal systematically. But these are responsible for most of the losses.

Pilfering has spurred the growth of a new industry, the professional security service which has largely replaced the local store detective in large enterprises. The services bring greater sophistication to the task — trained personnel, electronic surveillance devices, scientifically devised screening and hiring procedures — but at a cost which, since stores are not philanthropic . . .

It is indeed a problem, most of all for the consumer who one way or the other ends up paying for the high cost of pilfering.

Korean progress

Nobody seems to be taking particular notice of the occasion, but July 1973 marks the 20th anniversary of the Korean Armistice.

And come August, it will be one year since the two Koreas decided to take the next step and begin discussions on eventual reunification, a goal that still appears as distant and difficult of achievement as ever.

Progress, we see again, is measured in small steps, and often exceedingly slow ons. But considering the alternative in this case, it is still progress.

Before we play, place your cards down face up!

Haldeman's 'political' personnel

by CLARK R. MOLLENHOFF

WASHINGTON, D.C. — Despite the departure of former White House Chief of Staff H. R. (Bob) Haldeman, his ghost continues to be seen in the tough effort to impose partisan political standards on the career civil service.

The White House is pushing a government-wide effort to enforce political clearances on all promotions, hirings and transfers down to the GS-11 level — far below the "policy positions" of GS-15 and above where most administrations have injected a political factor.

The leader of the Nixon Administration's game plan since Haldeman's departure in mid-May has been Frederick Malek, former White House personnel boss under Haldeman and now a deputy director of the Office of Management and Budget.

The plan conceived by Haldeman and former Special Assistant to the President John D. Ehrlichman came to light during the testimony of former White House Counsel John W. Dean III in connection with "the enemies list" and the exercise of total government power to do favors for "friends" and "to screw our political enemies."

Unnoticed is the continued existence of the White House-oriented network pursuing a program to undermine independence of Cabinet officers and agency heads and "to maximize" the political influence on personnel placement as a means of controlling agency decisions.

The current unofficial "enemy list" stretches beyond the liberal Democrats who were outspoken in their opposition to President Nixon's Vietnam War policies. It also includes Republicans who have had the audacity to criticize the Nixon White House. Persons listed range from Senator Robert Dole, the conservative Kansas Republican, to Senator Lowell Weicker, a Republican liberal who has been an outspoken critic of the Watergate matter.

Senator Mark Hatfield, the liberal Republican from Oregon; Senator Charles Percy, an independent-minded and outspoken Illinois Republican, and such conservatives as Representatives William Scherle and H. R. Gross, of Iowa, and Representative John Ashbrook of Ohio are included.

The standard of loyalty is not measured in terms of liberal or conservative or even in Republican party support, but it is measured in degrees of obedience to the Nixon White House and its programs and policy pronouncements as to what is good or bad for the country.

Those who are not adaptable are not "team players" and were to be dealt with accordingly by Haldeman and Ehrlichman in the months immediately after Nixon's landslide victory last November.

The first bold moves to solidify political control of all agencies came in Haldeman's post-election demands for the submission of resignations by all in political policy-making jobs without regard for whether they had worked for the Republican Party and for the re-election of Nixon in 1972.

The move cleared the way for appointment of White House loyalists at top levels in all government agencies to administer political loyalty tests to the departments, to spy on the Cabinet officers or agency heads who exercised any independence and in some cases to take over effective operation of the agencies.

With four years of experience behind them, with a corps of dedicated White House loyalists trained and tested, Haldeman and Ehrlichman moved ahead to seize full political control of essentially all government programs.

Transfer of Ehrlichman's chief lieutenant, Egil Krogh, to the number two spot in the Department of Transportation was a sample of the plan. Krogh, who had carried out the plumber assignment to burglarize the office of Daniel Ellsberg's psychiatrist, had proved his capability of carrying out sensitive political chores and keeping his mouth shut.

Likewise, Jeb S. Magruder had committed perjury and had destroyed records to prove his loyalty to the Haldeman-Ehrlichman gang. But, Magruder, deputy director for the Nixon re-election committee, was still hot property because of unresolved Watergate problems.

Magruder was told he couldn't be placed in a job that required Senate confirmation because of his vulnerability resulting from his perjury, but he was placed in a $36,000-a-year top policy planning job in the Department of Commerce and was promised a better post when the air cleared.

Robert Odle, a former White House aide who was administrative officer at the Nixon re-election committee, didn't lie to the FBI or the federal grand jury because he apparently didn't have guilty knowledge of the Watergate plans. But, he had been discreetly quiet about a wide range of suspicious circumstances and was cleared for a high policy position in the Agriculture Department.

When Watergate blew up, it exploded the jobs of Krogh, Magruder and Odle. But most of the remainder of the Haldeman-Erlichman "loyalty" program continues under young men who fit the pattern for brightness, energy and, most of all, belief in the Nixon White House plan for political control of all government programs.

This is a deliberate effort to undermine the independence of Cabinet officers who in many cases are simply convenient figureheads and to enforce political standards in the administration of government programs.

Political favoritism in government programs is not new. The previous Kennedy and Johnson Administrations have a proven record. And it is doubtful if any administration could completely eradicate political considerations if it wished to do so.

What is new is the massive effort to enforce strict political loyalty standards down to the GS-11 level and to continue to try to execute that game plan in the face of the Watergate hearings which are demonstrating that the dirty details are almost certain to be uncovered.

Backs abortion decision

The board of directors of Northwest Community Hospital should be commended for their refusal to permit abortion-on-request, rather than criticized, as your July 13 editorial suggests. Why should they bear the ignoble burden of being the only hospital in our area to condone the slaughter of the innocent unborn?

You state that "the medical staff voted earlier — by a slim margin — to agree to abortion . . . (but) the board overruled them." This margin was indeed slim since there are 170 physicians on staff at Northwest, yet the vote, strangely, was 38-34, with less than half of the doctors casting ballots. Two physicians of my acquaintance stated they were unaware that such a vote was even being taken.

I take issue with State Rep. Eugenia Chapman's supposition that "more persons support abortion than oppose it." Only two states were allowed to vote on this question before the Supreme Court ruling, and both denied abortions by resounding majorities. Both states, I might add, have very small Catholic populations. The results might surprise Chapman, if communities were allowed to vote on this issue.

I agree that "under the Supreme Court decision, no one is forced to have an abortion," — not yet, anyway, but no hospital is forced to perform them, either. Northwest's board of directors, recognizing this fact, has lived up to its responsibility to the community. It has refused to kill its community's babies.

Thank God.

'No vote info on Rep. Young'

Early this month I telephoned U.S. Rep. Sam Young's local office to find out how he voted on the appropriations bill amendment to bar funds for continued bombing of Cambodia. I was asked my name, address and telephone number and told that "someone from Washington" would contact me with the answer. This approach surprised me as I always receive immediate replies from the offices of Senators Percy and Stevenson. I was never contacted, and have since discovered that others had the same experience.

My guess has to be that the Congressman prefers to have us learn this information through his press releases which appear to detail only what he wants publicized. Young's release on the bombing vote was very unclear, claiming that he "supported bills to cut off war funds." According to the Congressional record, the Illinois Republicans who, together with all the Illinois Democrats, voted for the bombing cut-off which the President later vetoed, were Reps. McClory, Anderson and Findley. Young, who chose to sustain the veto, voted for delaying the ban until September 1, and when this failed, for the compromise August 15 date.

I resent not having access to my Congressman's voting record as soon as it is available, and without public relations embellishments. The people of this district are perfectly capable of drawing their own conclusions, and release of this information should be an obligation to a constituency on the part of an elected representative, whether he is proud of it or not!

Lauds merchants

In behalf of the Arlington Heights Art Guild, I wish to publicly express my deepest thanks and appreciation to the Arlington Market Merchants Association for their financial support and cooperation in sponsoring the second annual fair "Art At The Market" Sunday, July 8. The Arlington Market Merchants Association, in generously contributing the sum of $500, funded the cash prizes that were awarded to exhibiting artists who were judged winners in their respective categories. In addition, a portion of this sum was utilized to establish a free drawing among the patrons, the winner receiving a cash award toward the purchase of art from among exhibiting artists.

In co-sponsoring this annual event, the Arlington Heights Art Guild and the Arlington Market Merchant Association is hopeful of bringing to the community the finest talent in the Chicagoland area, and we enthusiastically look forward to the continuation of this fine association.

Again, our thanks to the Arlington Market Merchants Association.

Business Today

by DEAN C. MILLER

NEW YORK — Truth in the form of the present world monetary crisis can be stranger than the fiction Banker-Economist Paul Erdman wove into a best seller while spending a year in a 17th century Swiss jail.

The 41-year-old boy banking genius, now out on bail on charges of allegedly frittering away $30 million in cocoa futures speculation while heading the United California Bank of Basel, spins an eerily topical tale in the "Billion Dollar Sure Thing."

In it, the U.S. president faces a crisis like the one today. World speculators snap savagely at the dollar because it no longer is convertible into gold. Russian sharpies plan to rape the dollar by making its currency gold-convertible, but U.S. diplomats learn of the plan and decide to counter by making the dollar gold convertible at $135 per ounce.

That amount, more than three times the Central Bank price today, would fill the dirty international plot and make the dollar supreme again.

THE SUSPENSE AND timeliness of the novel have made it a best seller in Great Britain, its author a much-sought guest on major television shows and resulted in translation into a dozen foreign languages.

"We're going into paperback, of course," said Erdman, now living with his family and parents in Fort Lauderdale, Fla., "and there's a chance Hollywood may pick it up."

Erdman, who said he decided to write because "it was a bit boring, you know, in jail," started his novel by setting gold at $100 per ounce but had to go up to $135 "just to keep up with the times." He told UPI that in the foreign editions he may change the figure to "$150 per ounce."

Erdman, who advised several governments on monetary matters before his bank got caught short in cocoa futures, was asked what he thought about the "real" monetary crisis.

"WELL, FOR ONE thing," he said, "The United States has been playing a very smart game. It let other countries take the brunt of it while making U.S. goods more valuable which is the name of the trading game. But now the U.S. must get off the dime, I think."

How would this be done?

"Very simple," said Erdman. "But let's put it in the proper framework. The U.S. has been spending more than it sells, so a lot of dollars are floating around the world. About $100 billion are out now; maybe up to $60 billion in government hands."

Normally, with the U.S. prestige behind them, dollars in that amount wouldn't cause a monetary ripple. But Watergate, an imbalance in trade and nagging inflation have caused many speculators to look to the yen and the German mark as safer havens. So they have dumped dollars.

How do we correct this? Erdman asked rhetorically.

You sop up a lot of them through the international "swaps" system-using foreign currencies on tap or credit to buy up unwanted dollars, thus strengthening them. On July 10th the Federal Reserve increased its "swaps" arrangement with other Central Banks by $6.25 billion so that it now has almost $18 billion to play with.

STRATEGIC INTERVENTION to support the dollar, says Erdman, also would help correct the dollar situation. Apparently the U.S., through other countries, has been doing just that since July 8.

But Erdman thinks that, realistically as well as fictionally, the biggest U.S. weapon would be to relink the dollar to gold at a premium price, in the $125 to $150 an ounce range.

"That not only would make dollar king again," he said, "it also would raise the value of that gold in Fort Knox to about $35 billion. If that were done, and currencies again were pegged to dollar values as in the past, I'll bet the Dow Jones would go up 100 points in three days."

Bank: controls may not work

Economists at Chicago's Northern Trust Bank say a stiff control program now could actually add to the difficulty of controling inflation.

It is "questionable whether the clamping on of strict controls will work smoothly this second time around," says the bank's newsletter, Business Comment.

"To a great — but immeasurable — extent, recent price increases have simply been the market's impersonal method of rationing excess demand," explain the bank's economists.

"If this function is significantly weakened by Freeze II and Phase IV, the result could be growing shortages of various farm and industrial products and, in consequence, even stronger underlying price pressures."

The economists note that new wage-price-profit guidelines will alter the distribution of income between the business and consumer areas. This will affect both the ability and incentive of these sectors to spend. Distortions could also be generated in the allocation of goods and services and an outbreak of hedge buying in anticipation of a later price bulge, cautions the bank.

Poll of executives

Price controls are favored

Tight price controls to fight inflation are favored by a 55 per cent majority of U. S. financial company executives responding to a survey conducted by Harris Bank in Chicago.

The survey, fourth in a quarterly series initiated last year, was directed to 3,010 top level executives of banks, savings and loans, finance companies, real estate investment trusts, insurance companies, and credit unions; and securities dealers and brokers and mortgage bankers to learn their opinions on economic issues and outlook through the third quarter of 1973.

Prices, however, are the only area where most respondents opted for controls stronger than those of Phase III. Of those who wanted controls of any kind — prices, wages, rents, prime rate, profits — a time span of seven to 12 months seemed appropriate by most. Given Phase III conditions, the rate of inflation was expected to remain the same by 56 per cent of the executives, while 25 per cent thought it would decrease through September.

Seventy-eight per cent of the executives expected increased business activity through the third quarter, down somewhat from the 88 per cent who forecast the increased business activity of the first half of 1973 in an earlier survey. Increases in the prime rate, short-term interest rates, and corporate profits — all of which have occurred — were forecast by two-thirds or more of the respondents.

THE STOCK market, as measured by the Dow Jones Industrial Average, is expected by half the financial executives to close in September at about the same level as in early April — the 930-970 range. Of those forecasting a decrease in the Dow, 43 per cent look for a September-end close of 850-900, only 8 per cent see it below 800.

The executives' own optimism about consumer outlook is diminished — 44 per cent expecting a more optimistic consumer outlook as compared with 70 per cent over the previous three surveys. Increased consumer spending through September is foreseen by 60 per cent, or 18 per cent less than in the previous survey. Consumer installment borrowing increases are expected by 70 per cent while only 38 per cent expect a consumer savings rate increase. Forty-seven per cent expect increased consumer demand for new housing; 58 per cent expect an increase in the mortgage rate.

Questionnaires were mailed in early April to a random sample of 3,010 executives. Questionnaires were returned by 789, or 26 per cent. The sample is representative geographically of financial institutions in the U.S.

Employe's sick pay: a liberal tax benefit

by CARLTON SMITH

One of the most widely neglected tax savings is available to employes and employers alike through the exclusion of sick pay from Social Security tax.

Few employes seem to be aware of this provision of the tax laws — not to be confused with the sick pay exclusion for income tax purposes, a complicated formula larded with many "ifs" and "whereases."

The provision with respect to Social Security tax is simple, and much more liberal.

Any payments made to an employe, under a plan that continues full or partial pay when the employe is off sick, can be excluded from the "wage base" on which the Social Security tax is levied.

THIS YEAR THE wage base is $10,800. That is, on your first $10,800 of earnings, you're taxed 5.85 per cent. You'll pay the same rate next year on the first $12,000 of earnings. To any extent that you can reduce your taxable earnings below these amounts, you'll pay less tax.

For example, an employe is currently earning exactly the wage base, $10,800. He is away from work because of sickness twice during the year — once for four days, another time for eight days. On the basis of a five-day week, his pay is $41.54 per day. Thus he can exclude 12 days' pay, or $498.48, from the earnings on which he's taxed.

Paying the 5.85 per cent tax on this lesser amount results in a saving of $29.16.

THE SICK PAY plans of some employers call for a certain percentage of the regular pay to be continued during periods of sickness. In such cases, the amount actually received by the employe can be excluded from taxable earnings.

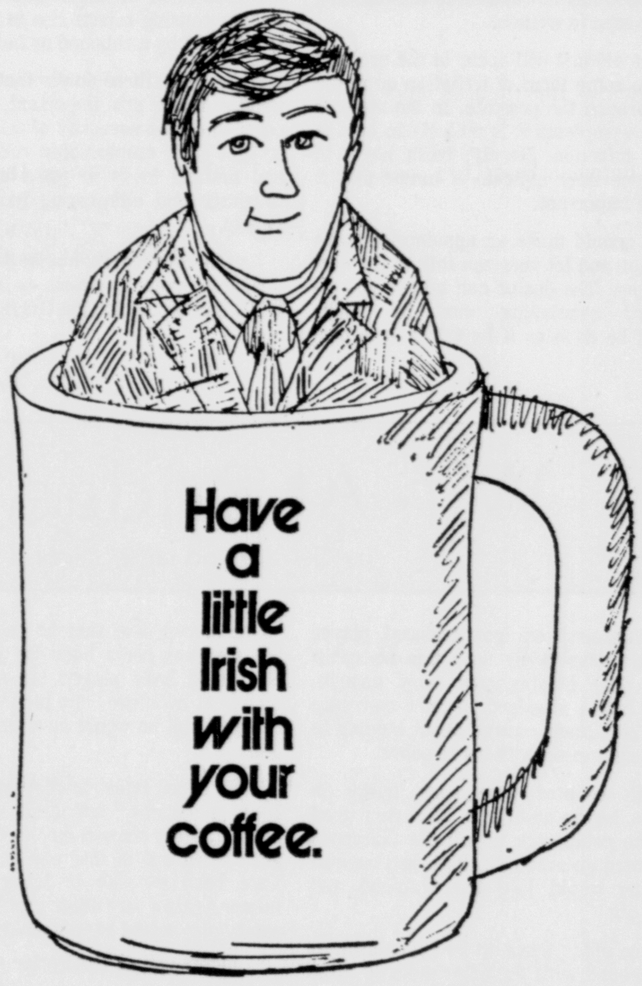

Employers are also relieved of paying their matching Social Security tax, and Federal Unemployment tax as well, when an employe's sick pay is thus excluded.

A key feature of the law on excluding sick pay requires that payments be made pursuant to an established plan or system. In a number of cases, there have been problems over the question of whether an employer actually had an established plan, or only a loose policy.

Use The Want Ads—It Pays

The Lighter Side... by Dick West

How long can you go without mentioning W---rg-te?

WASHINGTON — If you want to have a fun evening, and at the same time add luster to your reputation as a scintillating host or hostess, give a party at which your guests play a game called "Topic A"

The object of the game is to see who can go the longest without mentioning the W----g-te.

I gave a party like that a few nights ago and it was a gas.

The fun part comes from watching your guests struggle to make conversation. After a few minutes of desultory talk about the weather, egg prices and whether pigs have wings, an awkward silence settles over the group.

ONCE IN AWHILE someone will start to say something and then catch himself just in time to keep from breaking the ground rules.

Tension builds up rapidly. At my party, some of the guests began holding their breath to avoid bring up the forbidden subject. They soon turned blue and passed out on the floor.

Other guests had to bite their tongues to refrain from discussing the case. They lost a lot of blood but all recovered in time.

There was a run on the bathroom medicine cabinet where several guests tore off strips of adhesive tape and stuck them over their lips.

Three or four guests stuffed their mouths full of Kleenex. A few pulled handkerchiefs tight across their mouths and tied the ends behind their heads.

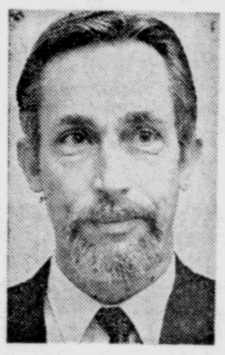

Two women sitting at each end of the couch spent the evening with their faces buried in velveteen sofa pillows.

THE PRESSURE of holding himself in caused one guest, Rimbeau Hookersmith, to puff up twice his normal size.

Clement Upbash got the nose bleeds. Audrey Pilfermore broke out in a rash. Kay Smidgen and Archibald Pedalfault broke out in a cold sweat.

Millie Piercelobe went into a hypnotic trance. Virgil Niptucket's blood pressure zoomed up so far his eyeballs turned crimson.

Endicott Torporbolt clinched his teeth so tightly a gold filling shot out of his mouth and richocheted off of Ladybug Slapforth's clavicle.

Dick West

Sue Cranny turned absolutely rigid. Sidney Wickburn developed a ringing in his ears that was heard three blocks away. Barney Deadwright developed a tic.

All of the guests eventually broke under the strain and wound up in a hot argument over whether John Mitchell was telling the truth. But while the game lasted, it was the best party I ever had.

The Doctor Says

by Lawrence E. Lamb, M.D.

Dear Dr. Lamb — About 15 months ago my 14-year-old son passed a few drops of blood. This happened after he had urinated. About a drop at a time.

His doctor said he thought it was an infection and had him on penicillin for two weeks, a strict diet and restricted activity.

Well I took him to a kidney specialist to see what he thought. He wanted him X-rayed and this checked out all right. He said to forget the diet and restricting of his activities. He scheduled a cystoscopy but the bleeding stopped. He said if the bleeding started again he would do it then.

Well, a month ago a spot was in his shorts and another one today. This wouldn't be enough for the doctor to be able to see where it was coming from, but it sure worries me. Everyone I talk with about it says they have never heard of this in a boy, only in women.

Is this very rare and does it have to be something serious? My son doesn't seem a bit concerned and says he has no pain.

Dear Reader — There are several points along the urinary tract where bleeding can occur. It does happen sometimes in young boys. It does not necessarily mean a serious disease. No one can tell the significance of bleeding, however, without a complete examination. The blood has no relation to the bleeding that is seen in women.

More often it will occur in the urethral tube to some form of irritation or in the area around the prostate. In the absence of any symptoms it is unlikely to be due to an infection. Rarely, fresh blood of this type may indicate a tumor and it can be important.

You should make an appointment with a doctor and let your son talk to the doctor alone. The doctor can talk to you afterward concerning what he thinks should be done or if he thinks it is possible to wait to see if the matter takes care of itself. But I would not neglect seeing a doctor.

Dear Dr. Lamb — In reference to your column on low blood sugar, I was surprised to see that the three important don'ts were not mentioned. 1. Don't smoke. 2. Don't drink alcoholic beverages. 3. Don't use caffeine (regular coffee) or strong tea. I have known this personally (in my own case fo labile glucose levels, easily influenced by disregard of the three don'ts plus excess carbohydrate intake) for years and have also been so advised by my gastroenterologist.

When I adhere to a strict diet for some weeks then I can avoid frequent meals. I trust info may be of value to other functional hypoglycemics.

Dear Reader — I agree with your three don'ts. There have been several columns on low blood sugar and, because of limitations in space, I've only been able to cover a imited number of points in each column.

To the admonition not to drink coffee I would add a ban on even the decaffeinated coffee if one also utilizes sugar and cream with the coffee. Incidentally, as I have discussed earlier, any liquid material passes immediately through the stomach.

If it contains sugar it will enable a rapid absorption of sugar into the bloodstream causing a high rise in blood sugar followed by a rebound or fall later.

While these three don'ts that you have written about are important, they will not obviate the necessity of using a proper diet plan emphasizing protein foods and natural foods to provide adequate roughage and eliminating foods rich in sweets.

Win At Bridge

by Oswald and James Jacoby

We watched an inexperienced player struggle desperately with this no-trump slam. The bidding was easy enough. South had a standard 16-point no-trump and North knew enough about bidding to jump right to six with his 19 points.

South counted nine easy tricks in spades, hearts and clubs. With very good luck he could pick up all the diamonds and score an overtrick. With just normal luck he would lose one diamond and make six.

There didn't seem to be any reason to fool around with the other suits so after winning the club lead in dummy he led a diamond and promptly finessed his queen.

West won the trick with his king and led a second club. South won in dummy again; led a second diamond and went through some real agony before finally playing his ace and dropping West's jack.

South looked around for approbation and asked us if he hadn't made a fine guess.

Our answer was that he certainly had but this was not a hand for guesswork. He should have played his ace of diamonds at trick two. The jack would have dropped and he would have had no problems.

If an honor failed to drop he would go back to dummy and lead toward his hand. If East showed out he would have gone down but in that case there would have been no way to bring the slam home. Against any other combination the safety play would have succeeded.

Employment for women

Jobs are there for those who want one

by MONICA WILCH

Back-to-school sales have already hit the stores as the buzz of preparation for autumn begins to heighten.

It's a time for new beginnings — students begin a new academic year, businesses begin new campaigns, organizations have new officers and new agendas.

Except for the housewife. There's nothing new for her come September — just the same old chores.

But if she wishes she could have a piece of the action, she has only herself to blame for sitting at home.

Involvement in that life that goes on out in the world can come in many shapes and sizes, most of which are now accessible to women.

The heart of the matter is employment. But what kind of work a woman does, how much time she devotes to a job, how much she gets paid — or whether she does volunteer work, whether she goes back to school first to prepare for a specialized career — all of this is up to her.

ALREADY, WOMEN comprise some 40 per cent of the work force, and that number is constantly increasing as discrimination barriers crumble and as more women become motivated to work outside the home.

While about 42 per cent of working women are supporting themselves and in many cases a family, more women than ever before are seeking work as a means of self-fulfillment. And they are being encouraged by a wide range of employment counselors, social and psychiatric professionals, who recognize a woman's need to feel a sense of accomplishment.

That need is more critical today because the sense of accomplishment can no longer come wholly from domestic work that has been taken over by modern technology. Tne need becomes especially critical, according to experts, when a woman reaches the state in life at which her children leave the home.

BUT WHATEVER her motivation, and whatever her age, education or experience, the woman who wants to work has many opportunities open to her.

An Arlington Heights employment agency executive — who happens to be a woman — reports that in the last two years, there have been "greatly increased job opportunities for women locally."

Bea Harris, executive director of Roland Arlington Heights, noted also that the overall job market has improved significantly over a year or two ago.

"There are more jobs than people now," she said.

As for housewives, fall is a prime time for them to get jobs, and, Mrs. Harris added, they are far from being undesirable applicants.

"Even though their skills might be rusty, they are sought after because they bring maturity to the job and also stability."

This thought was repeated by many other employment counselors and employers interviewed by The Herald. According to Craig Kopstan, personnel director for Honeywell in Arlington Heights, the mature woman who wants to return to work is "welcomed very enthusiastically."

THE IMPORTANT thing, according to those who help women get back to work, is self-confidence.

"Don't undersell yourselves," Mrs. Clarine Hall, executive director for the Girl Scouts of Northwest Cook County, urges. Mrs. Hall recently addressed a seminar at Harper College on the subject of how women can get "into the mainstream." The seminar was part of Harper's Women's Program, which provides educational and career counseling for women.

Discussing the opportunities for women in volunteer work and how this can lead to paid employment, Mrs. Hall emphasized the value of the skills and judgment women can develop through such activities.

"These are very salable to the business community," she said. She told some 100 women at Harper to "sit down and write out" all of the abilities and skills they have gained as home managers and volunteer workers when they decide to seek a job.

"HAVE YOU FIGURED out how many hours you can devote to volunteer work and how much time you need to spend at home? This is time management. Have you organized a fund-raising campaign for a charity? This is finance management — both revered business terms," she said.

In addition to self-confidence in one's innate and developed abilities, however, women do need certain qualifications, depending on the kind of job they are interested in. For a clerical job, a woman may only need to brush up on her typing skills.

But if she would like to take advantage of the many career opportunities open to her, she may need additional education or specialized training. This can often be planned in conjunction with working, according to counselors.

For example, women are particularly needed in the rapidly growing field of health care, according to Dr. Don A. Olson of Northwestern University Medical School. And, he said, they can plug in at any number of levels from which they can then advance with additional training.

"VOLUNTEERISM is a good way to investigate careers in the health field," Dr. Olson told the conference at Harper. After that, he said, there are "many specialty careers that can be approached in stairstep fashion."

For example, a woman could begin as a licensed practical nurse and work her way up to a registered nurse, and perhaps even go on for an advanced degree in supervision and administration. Or, he said, she might get into physical therapy, first as a therapy assistant, and eventually become a qualified therapist.

Women interested in health careers can obtain information and assistance from Health Careers Council of Chicago, located in the Wrigley Building.

Similarly, career opportunities with the federal government range on a scale from simple clerical jobs up through professional positions in engineering and medicine. According to Mary Ann Ruth of the Chicago office of the Civil Service Commission, federal government employes are now one-third women (compared to around 8 per cent in private industry) of whom 40 per cent hold professional positions.

SHE ADDED THAT in the federal government, unlike in many private companies, legal pressure has brought about the machinery for women to advance in their jobs and salaries with relative ease — and for them to obtain redress if they do run into discrimination.

There are two vehicles for obtaining employment with the government, Miss Ruth said: by simply applying and being evaluated, or by taking the civil service aptitude test. Information and assistance are available at the Job Information Center in the Federal Building, Chicago.

The federal government "particularly needs" applicants for clerical and accounting jobs, according to Miss Ruth. Other fields with opportunities include health, personnel, computer programming, budget and finance.

"Some of these can be had without specific background," she said. "Others require college education, or you can enter as quasi-clerical while getting training, and then move up."

CLOSER TO HOME, there are any number of job opportunities, according to area consultants.

"Many younger companies are looking for women to train themselves," Bea Harris of Roland Arlington Heights told The Herald. Her agency, which is entirely staffed by women, prides itself in personalized care of its applicants. Mrs. Harris' hand-picked counselors are sensitive to the needs of women seeking employment, and they take great pains to match each woman to the company and the position best suited to her abilities.

"We learn what companies have potential," Mrs. Harris said. She said women with degrees in engineering or business are particularly needed, and that jobs in personnel have especially promising futures for other professional women seeking challenging and responsible positions.

Another good place for women to look for jobs is the Honeywell Corp. in Arlington Heights. There, Craig Kopstan and his staff of women attempt to place applicants in the best positions for them, and then to see that they advance.

"PEOPLE HERE can advance on the merits of their abilities," Kopstan said.

Thanks to a generally improving job market and "continuing needs" due to employes leaving, Kopstan said, prospects for women seeking jobs now are pretty good. "We are wide open to women for technical jobs," he added.

Besides full-time positions from clerk-typist to engineer, Honeywell also has temporary employment opportunities. Called the Honeywell Clerical Overload, this program uses extra employed on a sporadic basis, as needed.

"We welcome these applicants," Kopstan said, adding that the work may run from a few days to several months, and "sometimes leads to full-time employment."

For women who don't want to be tied down full-time, the temporary job market is "fantastic," according to Barbara Ross, manager of Kelly Services in Des Plaines, one of several temporary employment agencies in the northwest suburban area.

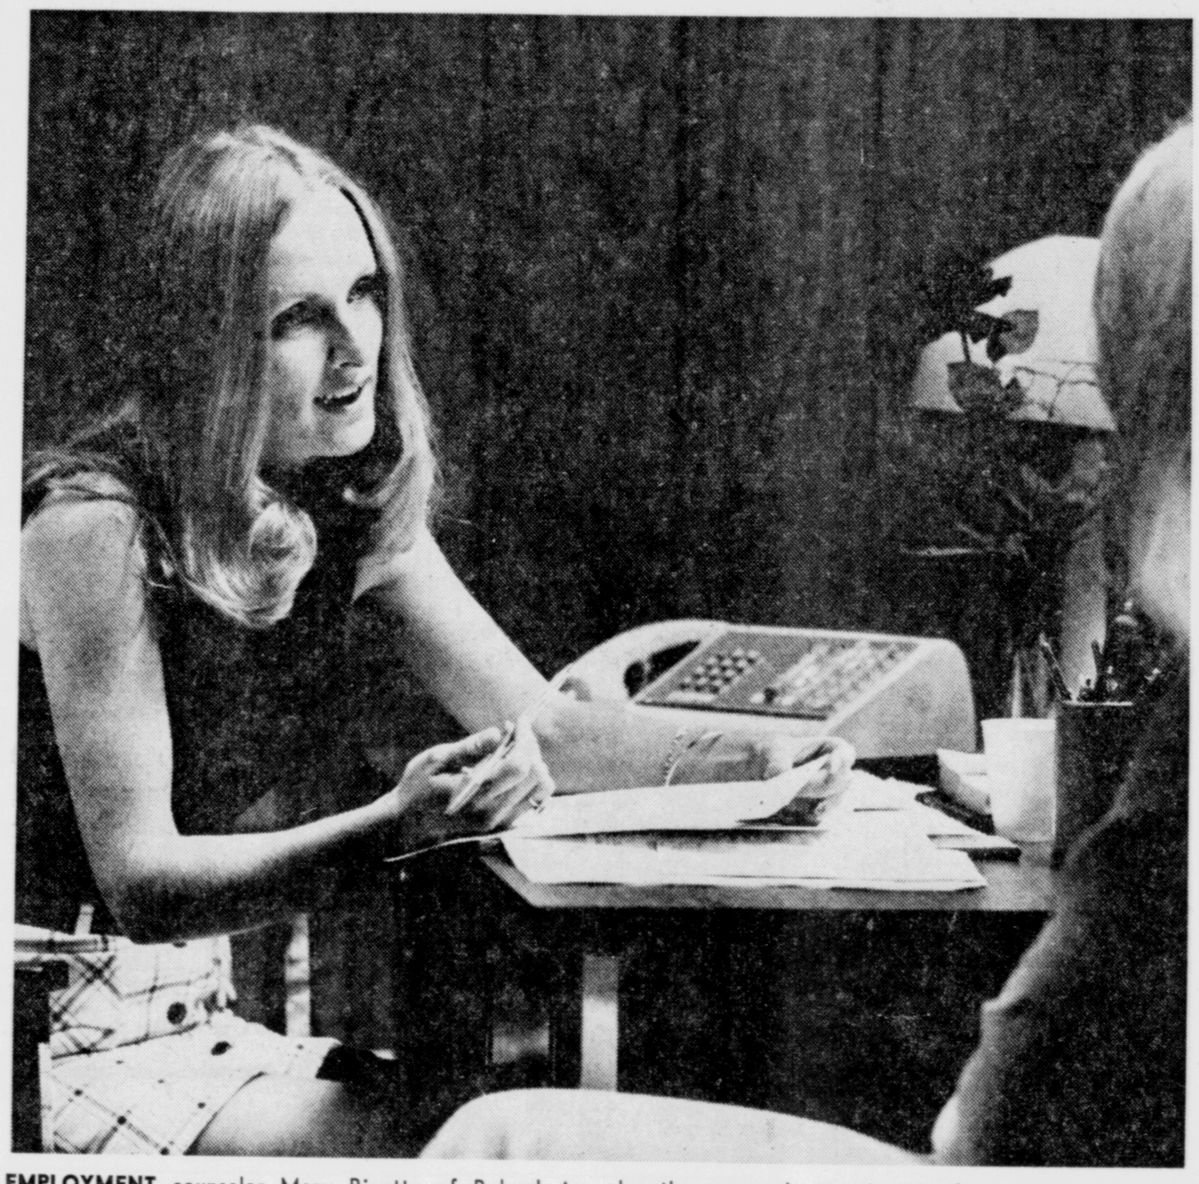

"WE HAVE TONS of jobs," she told The Herald, and added that they are "not just for summer. Some companies use temporary help all the time."

As a Kelly Girl, a woman can make anywhere from $2.80 to $3.20 an hour, depending on her office skills.

Mrs. Ross also offered optimism about part-time work, usually hard to come by. "We do a great deal of part-time placement," she said, noting that most of these jobs are geared to three full days per week. There are also some half-day jobs, however, she said.

While there is still a good deal of "tokenism" around as far as women employes are concerned, and while women still are paid less than men and given lesser positions in many businesses, the tide has turned in women's favor.

In the fall of 1973, in the Northwest suburbs, any woman who really wants it can have the career of her choosing. It only takes initiative and will.

EMPLOYMENT counselor Mary Rivotto of Roland Arlington Heights talks with a woman about job possibilities. Each applicant who comes to the agency gets lengthy personal attention to determine exactly what her capabilities, needs and wants are in regard to employment, says Bea Harris, executive director.

Tempting offers I can turn down

by KAY MARSH

On those rare days when I have nothing better to do (or, more often, on days like this one when I have plenty better to do but simply don't feel like doing it), I like to play "Un-Wish" by leafing through ads and catalogs. Then I try to decide which things I'd like least of all to have.

METER BEATER. High on my list is something called a "Dial-A-Con Anglo-Met-Convertor." I am depressingly aware that the U.S.A. will eventually go metric, and willy-nilly I'll struggle along behind. Meanwhile, "A miss is as good as 1.6093 kilometers." Or at least that's what I always say. Though, without the dial convertor, I'm not sure the old saying doesn't lose a bit of accuracy in the translation.

"UTTERLY USELESS AND ONLY $2.98" is another tempting offer I can refuse. Oh, the candor is refreshing. But what's "utterly useless" turns out to be an English Fog Fine Mist Sprayer, and further reading reveals that, alas, it's not so useless after all. According to the vendor's folksy copy, it has seemingly endless uses. He doesn't, however, use it himself; apparently his wife does all the work around the house. She uses it on house plants. She uses it in the laundry because "it does a better job than a spray iron." Then, in her spare time, she uses it when cleaning windows, cutting out "paying all that money for aerosol sprays." If he can sell the thing for $2.98, you'd think he could afford to buy his poor wife some aerosol sprays. Anyway, I liked the product a whole lot better when I thought it was utterly useless and thus delightfully decadent, involving no work at all for me.

BUT THE EASIEST TO RESIST new product I've read about lately is a gift idea for children from the Dart Industries people. This is advertised as a "Me-Book," a personalized book designed to "introduce a new dimension in children's reading." According to the ad, "The Friendly Giraffe" is the first Me-Book of a planned series. Any child I designate is the leading character in the story, and the book "is personalized more than 70 times, including the name of the giraffe, which is the child's name spelled backwards."

Actually, the book may be a fine idea, but the order blank raises some interesting questions. You as parent or giver fill out Personalized Story Data, being "sure you print clearly, allowing one character per space and one space between words." (Apparently the MCRB computers that do the personalizing are, as are all computers, at least slightly retarded.) Anyway, you give "Child's First Name or 'Nickname,'" last name, sex, address, etc. You also list "up to 3 friends, brothers or sisters," plus dog's name and cat's name.

The latter blanks, incidentally, allow only 10 letters. So heaven knows what you do if your pet is named, for instance, Nebuchadnezzar. For that matter, what do you do if the child has more than three "friends, brothers or sisters"?

THERE IS PLENTY of room to print the Grown-Up's Name, which is defined in parentheses as "Person Buying Book." Interestingly enough, there's no space for "mommy" or "daddy," which may be good thinking in these days of new-style family groupings. The order form does suggest "Aunt Jane, Grandma, Mom & Dad, etc." as possibilities for the "Grown-Up's Name to Appear on Personalized Book Plate." Presumably, that "et cetera" takes care of any alternate lifestyles or unconventional relationships.

In the next line, however, the computer swings back to traditional sexism, providing three blocks for the old-fashioned social titles (Mr., Mrs. or Miss) for the "Grown-Up" buying the book. But the rest of the line reverts to computerized Brave-New-World, in that there's only room for "First Initial" and "Last Name."

Yes, I know this is probably a major breakthrough and an ideal educational gift.

I'm prepared to believe that "Research . . . indicates that Me-Books have been very successful in heightening the reading interest of children who find themselves, their relatives, friends, pets and neighborhoods placed in the narrative." And $3.95 (plus postage and sales tax in California) seems a nominal price to pay for "a fascinating gift book for children, in which any child you designate is the leading character in the story."

AND PERSONALLY I'll miss good old Dick and Jane, not to mention Spot and Tip. Besides, the only "2-to 9-year old" I know at the moment to whom I'd care to send a Me-Book happens, through a set of unlikely circumstances and unfortunate ancestry, to be named Beauregard.

Fortunately, there are enough blank spaces on the order form to handle that many letters.

But can you imagine a giraffe named Drageruaeb?

Forbes reports Avon ladies find other work pays more

A popular occupation for suburban housewives in the last two decades has been that of "Avon Lady." Selling cosmetics door-to-door in her neighborhood, she could set her own hours and it was a pleasant diversion from housework that also provided some pin money.

However, according to a recent article in Forbes magazine, being an Avon Lady never was a very good deal for housewives, and the whole Avon sales system is becoming so archaic in today's society that the financial future of the company is in severe jeopardy.

According to Forbes, Avon ladies are not employes of the company but independent representatives. As such, they get no salary and no health insurance or pension benefits. The average Avon lady puts in about 15 hours a week and, at commissions of 25 per cent for sales under $100 and 40 per cent for sales over $100, she makes less than $2 an hour.

Out of that she must pay her own telephone, car, gasoline and other expenses, as well as buy all the demonstration aids and equipment which the company tells her she needs (even including the paper bags).

"THANKS TO this low-cost army of salespeople, Avon profits handsomely," the Forbes article noted. And most of the company managers and executives who make the handsome salaries are men. Of 111 division managers, an estimated 22 are women. At the executive level, Avon last year elected the first woman to its board of directors and, for the first time, promoted two women to vice presidents — all while involved in the settlement of a discrimination suit.

A giant among investments (Avon's market value runs around $8 billion for its 58 million shares), Avon's success, according to Forbes, "has always depended on the fettered housewife in the middle-class suburban community." She has been both Avon's customer and Avon's salesperson.

"Now, however, with more women than ever working, Avon ladies are finding fewer women at home when they call . . . At the same time, more and more potential salesladies are finding other work more profitable and satisfying," Forbes observed.

'Nontraditional' careers suggested

by GAY PAULEY

The time has come for the career woman to take a new look at the career she wants.

There's a whole new world of job opportunities out there, far afield of the traditional so-ralled "women's work." They range from A (for accountant) to V (for veterinarian).

The new opportunities opening mean usually higher pay and greater chances for promotion.

"Some women must change their career aspirations," says a special report from the Women's Bureau, the U.S. Department of Labor. "Since most openings in the usual 'women's occupations' will not be sufficient to supply jobs for all women seeking work, they must choose alternatives in nontraditional occupations.

"In essence, careers for women should not be any different from careers for men."

The bureau's report, titled "Careers for Women in the '70s," points to some illustrations of nontraditional occupations offering greater opportunities.

IN 1970, only 20 per cent of the nation's accountants were women, yet more than 31,000 openings are expected to occur each year during the remainder of the decade.

Engineering and science technicians will be needed at a rate of 33,000 each year during the '70s. Only 11 per cent of the 650,000 technicians employed in 1970 were women.

It is estimated that more than a million clerical workers will be needed annually to fill openings during the decade, but the highest predicted growth rate will be for jobs in the professional and technical categories, where earnings are higher and promotion opportunities are greater.

". . . Women must fully utilize the sources of legal protection and assistance which are available to them," the report states.

"Strong laws against discrimination in employment on the basis of sex are on the book . Having the legislation, however, is not enough. It is up to women to press for enforcement of the laws where necessary . . .

"One of the most difficult areas to deal with is the need to change employer attitudes . . . perhaps the overriding factors in this regard are the myths that employers, policymakers and others in our society have unfairly associated with the worklife patterns of women.

"ONE SUCH MYTH is that women are not seriously attached to the labor force as they work only for 'pocket money.'

"However, of the 33 million women in the labor force in March 1972, more than half were working because of pressing economic need. These women comprise a group who are either single, widowed, divorced, separated or married to men with incomes of less than $5,000 a year.

"Some progress is being made concerning employer attitudes," says the report.

Arlington pair move east

Newly married Deborah K. Stoker and Gary D. Stevens of Arlington Heights will be making their first home in Ada, Ohio, while they continue their education at Ohio Northern University. They exchanged vows and rings June 23 in the First United Methodist Church, Arlington.

Both '71 graduates of Arlington High School, they met during their sophomore year and continued a romance into college even though they were separated by many miles. Deborah started her freshman year at Ohio Northern, but Gary attended Harper College for two years.

The bride, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. George B. Stoker, 2405 E. Grove St., is in the college of pharmacy at the university.

Her husband is the son of Mr. and Mrs. Ralph C. Stevens Jr. of 602 E. Lynden Lane. He will be working for Cunningham's Supermarket while going to school.

Mr. and Mrs. Gary Stevens

A GOWN OF white organza, Victorian styled with a yoke of lace and tatting, was chosen by Deborah for her wedding day. The dress was ruffled at the high neck, on the deep yoke, the sleeves and floor-length hem. It featured lace-topped bishop sleeves and a lace sash at the waist. A lace cap held the bride's shoulder-length three-tiered veil.

Daisies and baby's breath formed a cascade bouquet carried by the bride for the 4:30 p.m. ceremony. She also carried a handkerchief from the groom's grandmother and wore an antique gold locket belonging to Gary's mother.

Six bridal attendants came down the aisle before the bride entered the sanctuary. Maid of honor Peggy Stoker, Deborah's sister, wore a two-toned gown of cotton voile with printed bodice and turquoise skirt. It was Victorian styled with a double ruffled hem. With the dress Peggy wore a white straw picture hat and carried a white wicker basket filled with yellow daisies and baby's breath.

THE FIVE bridesmaids were gowned alike in cotton voile, the bodice in a printed design and the skirt in daffodil yellow. The dresses were styled exactly like the maid of honor's and the girls wore picture hats to match. Their white baskets were filled with pink daisies and baby's breath.

In the procession were Jennifer Allen, Waverly, Ohio; Andra Bell, Morral, Ohio; Suzanne Moore, Broadview Heights, Ohio; and Nancy Spethmann and Mary Beth Weiler, both of Arlington Heights.

Gary chose Paul Stevens, his brother, as best man. The groomsmen included another brother, John Stevens; the bride's brother, Michael Stoker; and Frank Higgason, Ronald Hankley and Donald Spink, all of Arlington.

A buffet supper for 200 guests followed at the Stoker home. Later the newlyweds left for a week's honeymoon in Upper Michigan.

Their summer romance culminates in marriage

A romance that began three years ago when Suzanne Rose Brandt met George Edward Kleist while she was vacationing in Wisconsin culminated June 10 with their marriage in the Bethel Lutheran Church of Palatine.

Suzanne is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Robert Brandt, 4374 Lincoln Court, Rolling Meadows, and George is the son of Mr. and Mrs. George Kleist, Hazelhurst, Wis. For the past year and a half the bridegroom has been living in Arlington Heights to be closer to his sweetheart.

Kathleen Monaghan of Short Hills, N. J., was Suzanne's maid of honor and her bridesmaids included her sister, Cheryl, and two friends, Cindy Remian and Susan Matthies, both of Palatine. The bride's sister, Barbara, was a junior bridesmaid and another sister, Amy, 8, was flower girl. George's young brother, William, 8, was ring bearer.

A FRIEND OF the groom, Randy Enger of Palatine, was his best man. Scott Brandt, Suzanne's brother; Edward Bansfield, her cousin, from Rolling Meadows; and Steven Coy, also of Rolling Meadows, were ushers.

A reception for the 150 wedding guests was held in the Regal Room of the Camelot Restaurant, Des Plaines.

The bridal couple spent their honeymoon in Florida and now lives in Hanover Park where Suzanne is employed by Hanover Highlands School. She graduated from Fremd High School and from Harper College. The bridegroom works for Orbital Products in Addison.

For A Happy Life

It's fun in July to:

1. Arrange to have the piano tuned. Buy some new music when it's done.
2. Note the dates of county and state fairs you would like to visit.
3. Express three times as much approval as you do criticism.
4. Visit a different supermarket and compare prices on your favorite items.
5. Go outdoors and look up at the sky.
6. Recount the ways in which you secretly try to keep up with the Joneses.
7. Take a half-hour rest flat on your back every afternoon.
8. Rejoice in this: "Where there's love and truth there's heaven." — Patmore.

Newlyweds to make their first home in Buffalo Grove

When her aunt and uncle were married some years ago, Karen Ruth Wiener of Buffalo Grove was their flower girl, so at her wedding June 9 to Nels K. Flatebo their children were in her bridal party.

Flower girl for Karen and Nels at the double ring ceremony in the Evangelical Free Church of Arlington Heights was 3-year-old Heidi Melby of Bartlett. Heidi's brother, Brent, 4, was the ring bearer.

Mr. and Mrs. Nels K. Flatebo

The bride is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. William J. Wiener, former Mount Prospect residents who now live at 833 Saxon Place, Buffalo Grove. Nels' parents are Mr. and Mrs. Martin Flatebo of Madison, Wis.

Kathy S. Wiener, the bride's sister, was maid of honor, and there were two bridesmaids, Mrs. Brenda Decker of Wheeling, a childhood friend of the bride, and Mrs. Donna Flatebo, the groom's sister-in-law.

Nels had his brother, Pete Flatebo of Wheeling, as best man. Others in his party included Arnie Ness, Madison; Lenard Carlson, Lake Zurich; Tim Reilly, Arlington Heights; Bill Wiener Jr., the bride's brother; and Robert Eide, the groom's nephew from New York City.

The 350 guests were served dinner in the fellowship hall of the church following the wedding.

The newlyweds went to Florida for a week's honeymoon and now are living in a new home in Buffalo Grove. Karen, who graduated from Prospect High School and attended Trinity College in Bannockburn, works at the college. Nels, a graduate of the Madison Area Technical College, is employed by Western Electric in Palatine.

A 'designing' June bride

Weeks of sewing preceded the wedding of Constance Lee Hopkins, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Raymond W. Hopkins of Des Plaines, who teamed with her mother to design and make the gowns of her three bridal attendants.

Constance did the designing and made six-foot satin macrame belts to match the brightly colored bodices of the girls' dresses. Her mother did the sewing for the girls and for her daughter, who wore a bridal gown of white spectacle nylon.

Constance was united in marriage to Thomas J. Brennan, son of Mr. and Mrs. Robert Brennan of South Bend, Ind., on June 16 in the First Congregational Church, Des Plaines. Maid of honor was Judith Lichterman of Bloomington, Minn. Bridesmaids were Mrs. Ronald Hopkins, sister-in-law of the bride, and Jill Brennan, the groom's sister.

The groom's party consisted of Paul Guest of Lake City, Minn., best man; Patrick Brennan, the groom's brother, and Kenneth Powers, Los Angeles.

The reception was held in Webster Hall of the church. A three-week wedding trip took the couple through New England and Nova Scotia and they are now living in Indianapolis.

Constance, a 1970 Maine West graduate, and her husband are Carleton College graduates. Thomas is now a research assistant at Indiana Medical Center, Indianapolis.

Second City comes to Harper

The Second City Touring Company is presenting a collection of satirical comedy sketches at Harper College this Friday.

The revue, titled "Oldies but Goodies" or "The Best of Second City," draws from 13 years of material. Show time is 8 p.m. in the college center. Public admission is $1. Harper summer session students and faculty members are admitted free with IDs.

Located at 1616 N. Wells in Chicago, Second City is noted for improvisational theater. The Second City name was taken from the title of the late A. J. Liebling's derisive profile of Chicago in the New Yorker magazine from December 1959.

Without sets, employing only a few hand props, Second City actors create an entire world of satire. Subjects range from politics to movies, from great books to puppy love.

At the Second City Theater, actors improvise on ideas suggested by the audience, by the director or by some of their own members. The Touring Company, which developed in 1967, has played the country from Los Angeles and New Orleans to Phoenix and Washington, D.C.

Further information about Friday's program is available through the student activities office, 397-3000, ext. 243.

The Home Line

by Dorothy Ritz

Dear Dorothy: I've got meat loaf trouble; they crumble. I've tried everything, followed recipes faithfully, let it sit five minutes or so after baking and so on, but no matter what, it falls apart when sliced. How now, good counselor? — Sharon Peterson

You're going to laugh about this because it seems silly at first hearing, but what you ought to try is a good spanking. That's right — just spanking the loaf before baking it. It expels the air and eliminates holes in the loaf. People have all kinds of ideas about handling meat loaf. One of our readers shapes them, puts them in the pan and refrigerates for four hours before baking. Another substitutes oatmeal for bread, using three-fourths of a cup to each pound and half of ground beef. I use bread or fine cracker crumbs, onion, egg, milk, ketchup, salt and pepper, spank well and arrange the loaf on a slice or two of bread, depending on the size of the loaf, and bake it on a cookie sheet.

Dear Dorothy: One of your readers suggested using small pine cones to keep cats out of flower gardens. Should it be a certain kind of cone, placed in some particular way? So far, the method has not worked for me.—Joe Sheehan

I don't know. So I've got to appeal to readers for help on this one. It may be just another old wives' tale, but perhaps there are certain strong-smelling cones that work perfectly.

Dear Dorothy: I'm quite aware that dwarf fruit trees don't produce as much fruit as the full-size trees, but we're ever so pleased with our dwarf apple trees. There are a couple of advantages some may have missed: The apples are easily picked, and we can cover the whole tree with nylon netting so the apples are left whole.—Helen Carpenter

(Mrs. Ritz welcomes questions and hints. If a personal reply is required, please enclose a stamped, self-addressed envelope. Write to her in care of Suburban Living, Paddock Publications, Box 280, Arlington Heights, Ill. 60006.)

A bilingual, bicultural kids' show

by PATRICIA McCORMACK

NEW YORK (UPI) — BC-TV sounds as though it might be another stone age TV cartoon show.

Not so. BC in this case stands for Bi-Cultural. The BC-TV is bicultural children's television — a federally funded, nonprofit organization formed in 1972 to develop the nation's first Spanish-English children's educational television program.

The idea: Make it bilingual and bicultural and show it on a daily, national basis.

The program makes its debut in the fall and is intended for use on facilities of the Public Broadcast Service system, once individual station clearance is obtained. The BC-TV goal is 200 stations.

THE SHOW'S FORMAT will incorporate all the electronic magic and technical finery now standard for children's educational television.

A live cast of characters will be interspersed with film, computerized animation, music, storybook characters, myths, fantasies, games, song and dance to convey educational curriculum.

Spanish heritage, culture and customs will be honored and provide a common basis for all cultures. Program time will be equally divided between the Spanish and English languages.

The target audience: Millions of young American children — both Spanish-oriented and Anglos white, black, red, and yellow. The age group: From preschool through the primary grades.

The long-term purpose of this program, funded by the U.S. Office of Education (USOE): "To strengthen the nation through ever-developing increments of unity and understanding on the one hand while assuring the full vigor and contribution to society of an heretofore untapped human resource approaching 14 million persons."

DOES BC-TV want and need both a Spanish-oriented and an Anglo audience? Yes. The reason: Genuine bilingualism — biculturalism cannot be achieved without it. An Anglo audience is as essential as the Spanish-oriented to achieve the sought-after goal.

The desired bilingualism-biculturalism will occur only when Anglo and Spanish-oriented children become familiar with the language, heritage and customs of the other. That's the theory.

There is nothing remedial or corrective in the BC-TV approach. The BC-TV effort is bilingual, bicultural, a new dimension entirely for children's educational television.

Uncle Sam is putting more than $5 million into the new education show.

Foreign-car ads show more imagination

HOLLYWOOD — A foreigner who visits America and hears about economic problems in the country might well be confused after noticing the luxury items being offered in television commercials.

Take, for instance, some of the automobiles advertised on the home screen. In addition to lower-and-middle-priced cars like Chevrolet, Ford and Dodge, we also see such makes as Cadillac, Lincoln Continental and Mercedes-Benz being extolled in commercials.

Television ads are getting more aware of the social changes in the land — in fact, they help create them — and it is no longer a big surprise to see commercials for, say, flying lessons, mutual funds or expensive perfumes.

BUT GETTING back to cars, the foreign automakers seem to have better, more imaginative commercials going for them over-all than American manufacturers. What is best about the foreign car ads is that they seem to stress practical points more than the U.S. auto commercials, which in the main continue to emphasize trivial factors in their selling pitches.

Among the foreign car ads, for instance, Volvo has had very sound presentations focusing on how long its cars last. Audi does a clever job indicating how it combines the good elements of some other autos. Fiat does nicely too. Mercedes emphasizes its maneuverability and engineering. Volkswagen, which has long had the wittiest television commercials of any car, makes its points succinctly. On the other hand, Opel has a commercial now with a kind of oom-pah-pay music that does not set my heart aflame.

The Japanese cars, like Toyota and Datsun, have, of course done wonders for themselves on American television, and they, too, have emphasized practical matters. And then there is Mazda with its major selling point, the rotary engine.

IT IS SURPRISING that so many commercials for U.S. autos have a sameness, an unimaginative flavor, to them. There are some splendid-looking American cars — not only Cadillac and Continental (both of which are shown off very well visually in their commercials), but also autos like the Grand Prix and Firebird and Charger and a number of others; and it seems to me that video ads for many domestic makes could be more effective in terms of emphasizing both practical matters and individual styling.

Paddock Patrol

by Jim Cook, TURF EDITOR

IT WOULD HAVE BEEN TOO much to comprehend.

Secretariat's appearance at Arlington Park June 30 will remain the highlight of the track's 1973 meet, if not for years and years to come. Hardly anything could alter the image Super Horse left on the full house that memorable afternoon.

But there was renewed excitement, an intermittent buzzing of anticipation that could have resulted in another crescendo Saturday if Meadow Stable had followed through with its nomination of Riva Ridge in the 41st running of the $100,000-added Arlington Handicap.

Secretariat and Riva Ridge in living horseflesh within a span of three weeks?

Improbable, but still not impossible.

Many believe Riva Ridge will enter the ring against sparring partner Key to the Mint in the $100,000 Suburban Handicap at Aqueduct on the same day as Arlington's bonanza.

Why Riva Ridge would want to buck The Key for the winner's share in New York when he would almost be assured of the top slice at Arlingon is beyond me.

The confrontation between the two four-year-olds, though, is titanic. They've met head-to-head on eight different occasions and each owns four decisions, so the upcoming clash does have some significance.

But owners and trainers aren't engaged in a pennant race. Wins and losses don't overshadow purse earnings. Riva Ridge is the only millionaire ($1,009,727) in training, although Secretariat will join him as only the 13th club member the next time out.

Equally impressive is Riva Ridge's current form which is nothing less than brilliant. He's fresh off a world record 1:52 2/5 clocking in the 1-3/16 mile Brooklyn Handicap.

Here again, Arlington is offering the same distance Riva Ridge obviously likes, but on the turf course. The Suburban is on the dirt but at a mile and one-quarter.

Winner of two legs of racing's Triple Crown (Kentucky Derby and Belmont), Riva Ridge has been syndicated for over five million bucks — third only among the record six for Secretariat and the five and one-half for Nijinsky II.

Riva is scheduled to retire in the latter part of fall, making his limited number of remaining appearances almost as treasured as the Sec's.

I'd gamble that the same 41,223 that turned out for Secretariat's exercise at the Arlington Invitational would return for the Riva Ridge Show and maybe even bring their friends along!

Incidently, Secretariat, Riva Ridge and Nijinsky will be standing at Claiborne Farm at what could easily be tagged the Thoroughbred Hall of Fame.

It will probably take an appearance by Riva Ridge to put Arlington Park at last year's attendance and handle pace. Through 69 dates (Saturday) Arlington has drawn 831,572 patrons who have wagered $91,967,076.

Last season at this time, the plant was frequented by 861,045 fans who bet $94,591,219. In round figures, the track is behind by about 30,000 in the turnstyles and roughly $2,500,000 in handle.

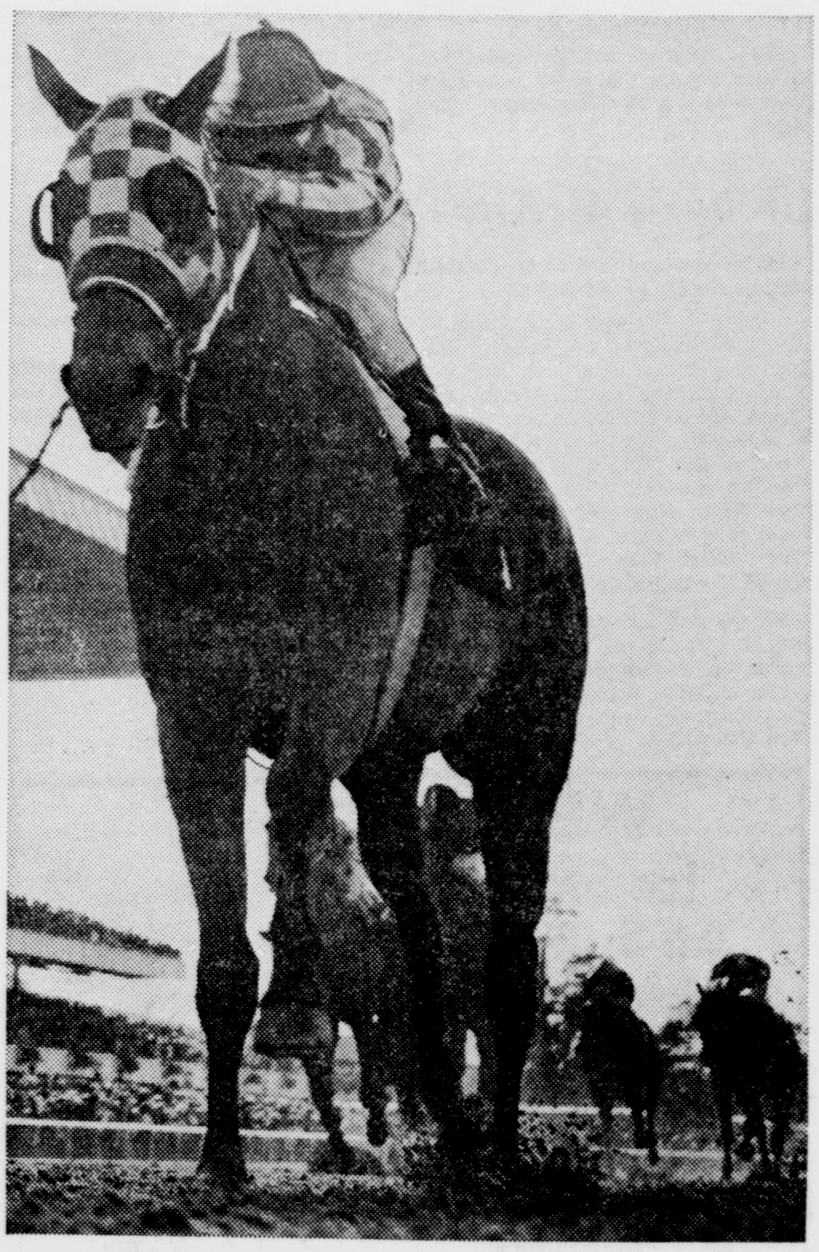

Encouraging, though, is the fact that since the turning point in the season — July 4th — Arlington Park has not dipped below 10,000 on weekdays or 20,000 on Saturdays. Both the weatherman and the reinstatement of gimmick betting can be credited with the recent surge.

Belated congratulations to Bill Thayer, Arlington Park's very capable general manager who was distinguished as Illinois Horseman of the Year by the Horseman's Benevolent and Protection Association last week in a party at the Arlington Park Towers Hotel.

A 47-year-old veteran in the diversified field, Thayer made the gradual movement from office boy, jockey agent, a stint with the H. B. P. A., racing secretary, steward, assistant executive director and as an administrative assistant to the Illinois Racing Board.

His latest tour of duty before joining Arlington Park as its general manager was as manager of Finger Lakes in Canandaigua in New York where he helped the track achieve a record mutuel handle.

THE SECOND coming? Riva Ridge, nominated for Saturday's Arlington Handicap, will probably refuse the issue and tangle with Key To The Mint in the Suburban Handicap at Aqueduct.

Prospect pitcher in dazzler

by TOM CARKEEK

Mount Prospect's Jim Emslie has gone pretty much unnoticed through this summer's Ninth District Legion baseball campaign, but you can bet he won't anymore.

All Emslie did Monday night was come this close to a no-hitter as Mount Prospect defeated Logan Square 4-0. With the victory, Post 525 moved up past the Lions in the league standings. Prospect now stands 5-6 and is in fourth place while Logan Square is a half game back at 5-7.

Emslie surrendered a two-out infield single to Pat Rooney in the second inning, and that was all that stood in the path of Emslie becoming the first pitcher to throw a no-hitter in the Ninth District this year.

Emslie nearly lost his shutout, though not his one-hitter, in the fourth. With one out he walked the Lions' Steve Bobowski. After Jim Bucaro flied out, Stan Bobowski lined a ball-one pitch to left where Jim Laing sprinted to his right and dropped the ball for an error. Steve tried to score from first on the play, but a perfect relay throw by third baseman Keith Semar to catcher Dale Schoenbeck nailed Bobowski up the line. Those were the only base runners the Lions managed.

Actually, Emslie had to share the limelight with Logan Square pitcher Paul Kastner through the first five innings. Kastner gave up a eouble to the second man he faced, Loren Crites, but then set down Mount Propspect without a hit until the btttom of the sixth. So Emslie and Kasiner had matching one-hitters heading into the last of the sixth.

But that's when Mount Prospect exploded. Ed Katzman singled to right to open the inning. Then leadoff man Greg Fink tried to sacrifice Katzman to second, but the throw was dropped at first base and everyone was safe on the boot.

Crites popped up but then Bob Chen drove in the first run of the game with a ground single up the middle. Schoenbeck followed with a base hit and Rick Haaning knocked in Chen by singling to right to make it 2-0. Laing struck out but Jim Anderson's base hit to left scored two more and made it 4-0 before Semar lofted a fly to left which Rooney caught against the fence to end the inning.

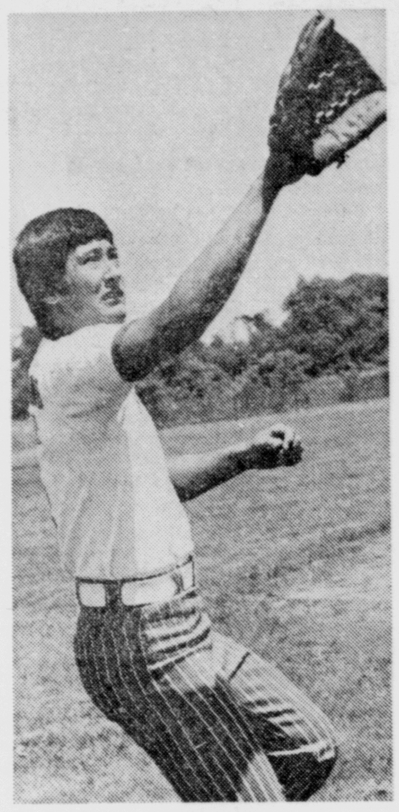

Emslie didn't strike out a man until the fifth, but then he bore down and fanned five of the last nine men he faced. The Lions went down 1-2-3 in every inning but the second and fourth.

Kastner walked two (Crites and Chen) back-to-back in the fourth, but Schoenbeck flied out and Haaning rapped into a 4-6-3 double play to snuff out any threat. Those were the only walks he gave up and it matched his strikeout total.

Both teams are out of title contention in the Ninth District, but the exact final standings are important in determining pairings for the district tournament, which opens next Tuesday. With only a game and a half separating second place from fifth at this point, every game still counts.

THIS DUO COMBINED to drive in three of Mount Prospect's four runs during a four-run sixth as they beat Logan Square 4-0 Monday night. Bob Chen (left) singled in one run and Jim Anderson drove in two others during the uprising. Chen starts in center and Anderson is the shortstop for Merv Fink's Prospectors.

Wildcat homer shocks Barrington

Wheeling win highlights prep play

Wheeling dramatically tripped Barrington in the Summer High School League to highlight a full slate of games in the final week of the regular season. The post-season tournament is scheduled to begin July 23. Wheeling and Maine South head the North and South Divisions of the conference, respectively.

MARGALSKI SHOCKS BARRINGTON

"I think he was surprised as anybody," said Wheeling coach Ron DeBolt who couldn't remember ever seeing Ken Margalski hit a home run.

But that's exactly what Ken delivered in the bottom of the seventh to boost Wheeling past Barrington, 3-2, in a battle of division leaders.

The Wildcat victory snapped a first-place tie between the two powerhouses. Wheeling stands at 13-2 while Barrington slipped to 13-3-1 in the North. And the 'Cats had to beat Barrington's best to do it.

Rob Simond, who had never tasted defeat while pitching for Barrington either in high school play of summer leagues, entered the contest with a 6-0 mark and about 30-0 overall.

After Barrington jumped on top with single runs in the fourth and fifth, Wheeling clawed back with a pair in the fifth as Margalski warmed up with a single, Earl Pfister followed suit, stole second and both runners tallied on Howie Brauer's booming double.

The contest remained deadlocked at two apiece until the seventh when Margalski got another shot at Simond and sent him reeling to his first defeat in a Broncho uniform.

Willie Kozel, Simond's adversary on the mound, was nothing less than spectacular in limiting Barrington to just three hits, walking just three and fanning 11. Al Newman shared hitting honors with Margalski with a pair of singles.

FREMD WALLOPS ARLINGTON

Fremd hurler Randy Kraft yawned all the way to the victory column as the Vikings routed Arlington, 12-1.

The winners posted three runs in the second, one in the third and four more in each of the fourth and sixth frames while totaling only six hits on the evening.

Arlington helped the cause with three errors and the seven walks yielded by Card starter Don Kamps.

Steve Dwyer emerged as the hitting star for the Vikings with a 2-for-4 performance that featured a triple and three runs batted in.

The victory was Fremd's 13th of the season against six losses while Arlington fell deeper into the cellar of the North Division with a 5-13 mark.

MUSTANGS STUN DUNDEE

Don Howe plays first base for Rolling Meadows, but in one of the rarest occurrences in baseball, he failed to touch the ball as the Mustangs whipped Dundee, 3-1.

Howe didn't earn a putout in the contest chiefly because hurler Ed Bejrowski fanned an incredible total of 15 Dundee batters. The other putouts went to center (3), right, shortstop and the catcher.

Bejrowski limited Dundee to just six hits and permitted their only tally in the first inning via a pair of wild pitches. The Mustangs, meanwhile, waited until the fifth frame to register their first hit and crack the scoring ice.

Howe led off by getting hit by a pitch before Joe Riplinger notched a single to left that went for an additional error permitting Howe to tie the score.

Bruce Hanson drew a pass to put runners on first and second and Dave Thorstensen followed with a booming two-run triple that provided the margin of victory.

The triumph upped Meadows' record to 9-7-1 despite the fact that they compiled only two hits for the evening.

KNIGHTS ROCK CROWN TWICE

Prospect showed little mercy in a doubleheader against Crown by spanking the visitors 10-0 and 9-5 to boost its record to 12-6.

The Knights put the opener in the win column early in the contest by erupting for seven runs in the first two innings. Tom Hayes sparked a five-run first with a leadoff walk, and Mike Quade followed suit. Kevin Kelley doubled for one, Mike Radoll reached on a boot, and Randy Clark, Laddie Janda and Craig Nicholas all followed with run-producing singles.

Janda was the chief contributor in the second frame as well as he stroked a two-run single after Quade had reached on an error and Kelley had walked.

The winners added one more in the fifth as Mark Keane drove in Janda with a single and Quade's roller was booted to allow another Knight tally to cross.

Prospect capped the scoring in a two-run sixth spearheaded by Rich Streng's double, a walk and Nicholas' single. Keane worked the first six innings on the mound for the Knights and picked up the shutout decision with relief help from George Savage. The combo limited Crown to just four hits.

SCORE BY INNINGS

Crown	000	000	0— 0- 4-4

KNIGHTS RIDE 7-RUN THIRD

Prospect exploded for seven runs in the third inning of an abbreviated five-inning nightcap against Crown and cruised to a 9-5 victory.

The Knights banged out six hits in the third to break the seal on a 2-2 deadlock. Mark Keane singled to lead off the inning, Paul Obuchowski walked and Tom Garms dragged a bunt single to load the bases.

With two outs, Kevin Kelley walked to force one home before Mike Radoll, Laddie Janda, Mike Quade and Keane all singled runs across. The finale tallied on a delayed doublesteal.

Prospect sent runs home in the first and second stanzas on a doublesteal and Radoll's run-producing double. A variety of Prospect hurlers ventured to the mound.

Obuchowski hurled the first three frames, Mike Chumra faced three hitters while contributing one-third, Keane walked a batter on four pitches and Kelley mopped up with three strikeouts in one and two-thirds of an inning worth of work.

FALCONS SHADED

Forest View never could recover from two first-inning runs by hosting Addison Trail and dropped a 2-1 decision despite a fine pitching performance by Mike Langowski. He struck out seven and allowed four hits, but Addison hurler Jerry Tomaselli was even tougher, spinning a two-hitter and striking out eight.

Forest View's only run scored in the third on an infield hit by Mike Petran.

Penalties stiffened for Legion coaches

It is felt in some quarters that recently some baseball coaches and players in the American Legion Ninth District program have heaped excessive and unnecessary personal abuse on umpires — more than what is normally expected. Chairman Gene Sackett has acted accordingly.

Sackett last week sent the following memorandum to coaches and managers in the Ninth District:

"Because of conduct and actions of a few coaches and players at recent ball games the following will become effective . . .

"Any coach thrown out of a game because of profanity and/or touching an umpire will be suspended from league play for a period of three ball games, exclusive of the one in progress."

(For players, penalty for the same actions is four games).

"Questioning the judgment of an umpire on balls and strikes will be stopped as of the date of receipt of this letter. An occasional growl is part of human nature, but when it is continued and pursued for several innings at a time, it ceases to be part of baseball and indicates poor judgment on the part of the coach.

"As long as you and I represent the Americal Legion, I will do everything within my power to present an image to the public, which encompasses the Sportsman Code. It might be a good idea for some of you to reread this important article.

"I hope this will be the last time we will have to put out this type of letter. Therefore, I trust all will act accordingly."

Sportsman's Notebook

by Bob Holiday

IN CASE YOU haven't yet succumbed to the blandishments, and the color brochures you have received lately, you may not know what's in store when you accept an invitation to dinner from one of the many developers who are offering "choice" properties on various federal impoundments throughout the country.

Now please don't read things into this piece that I don't mean. I doubt that any land developer is any more or less scrupulous than any other. You have to watch them all.

Still, "breathes there a man . . . etc." who has once wet a line, or rowed a boat, or shot a quail, who hasn't considered a piece of property on a lake, where he can retire to fish and boat and lie in the sun.

It was with just such an idea that we accepted an invitation to dinner and a sales presentation on property on Table Rock Lake in Missouri. The Ozarks are one of my many passions and the idea of owning a piece of land on Table Rock or Lake of the Ozarks certainly appeals to me. Or it did appeal to me.

The sales personnel welcome you at the door and show you to a table set for two couples and one salesman. (The food is okay, but you have to pay for your own martini.) As you enjoy your dinner, you chat with the other folks and the salesman, but your questions are studiously avoided until the real business begins, which is after the ice cream.

First comes the "pitchman," a personable chap who tells a couple of jokes and then begins telling truths, including the fact that the corporation who is paying for dinner is actually listed on the New York Stock Exchange. He's much more impressed with this fact than I am, because I know it doesn't have a thing to do with the subject at hand.

The main appeal of this type of sales presentation seems to be that you should order yourself a lot right now while the price is right, because the price is sure to go up soon . . . like right after dinner, according to the urgency in his voice. Again, I'm not impressed, because if I have property in the Ozarks, I just might pack up and go there.

After you get a very general presentation, you find that you can hop a plane or a bus and take a tour of the area in which your property lies. They'll even put you up at their own motel and feed you for three days.

If you don't like the looks of things, they'll give you back your "deposit" and the monthly payments you've been making on your lot. That seems fair, so when they show you slides of other properties they say they've developed, the pitch isn't sounding too bad.

The slides show the "before and after" of the same company's development in Arizona or New Mexico or someplace. From scrub brush and rocks to homes on paved streets with sidewalks, gutters, street lights and "just plain folks" enjoying the sunshine. Sure looks good. Then they get down to serious business.

"Our men are allowed to talk to only one couple at a time," the leader says, "and we're a little shorthanded tonight, so some of you nice folks just enjoy your coffee and a man will be with you in a moment."

Our dinner companions look rather bleak as they are whisked away to another table where the man has his brief case open and his pen out.

Eventually, "our man" joins us . . . or in this case, the first of three "our mans," because we kept asking embarrassing questions.

"Our man" didn't hardly get his chair warm, because the first question I asked is what provision has been made for sewage disposal.

"According to the federal agreement," he began confidently, "which is all we have to go by . . ." and then he showed me clause (B) paragraph 2, small print "X," which said that although the developer believes that septic systems are fine at this subdivision, a study by the Missouri Valley Water Pollution Control Board proved that septic systems don't work well there.

Unfortunately for our first "our man," I'm a fast reader and further down in the paragraph it said that if the Board discovered that our septic system was polluting the lake, we would be ordered to stop using it until a sewage system was built and paid for by the property owners' association! "But that will never happen," our man said.

He didn't say why he knew that would never happen and I knew it would be fruitless to ask. Anyway he turned us over to another "our man" with the hope that he "could help these prople out."

"I want about 100 feet on the lake," I told him. "How much?" He consulted a mimeographed sheet and quoted "$9,553.00." "Does that include water, sewage, sidewalks, curbs, gutters, electric service and water?"

"They'll run electric service and telephone lines in when you build," he smiled. I asked about the other features. "I'm sure the property owner's association will eventually want all those things," he answered confidently.

Since he was forgetting to mention it, I thought I'd better help him out by reminding him that this (and most other federal impoundments) do not have land available right on the water. "Yes," he agreed, "your property only goes to within 25 feet of the water, the federal government retains title to the rest, but you can use it."

"Can I improve on it?" Sure, I can plant grass and trees, but I can't put any buildings on it. "Can I build a boat dock on it?" Sure, we give everyone permission to build boat docks.

I reminded him that "he" was in no position to give anybody permission to go anything on federal property. He turned us over to our third "our man."

This fellow was smooth. "Mr. Holiday," he began, "think of all the open lands and recreation area you'll enjoy . . . riding trails, bike trails, hiking trails." Impressive, I replied, have you dedicated certain properties in this development for all these activities?

"Oh," our man breathed happily, "didn't anyone tell you that the federal government retains title to the entire shoreline and it is accessible to the public?" Ah . . . so now we know where the horses and hikers go . . . right across my lake front.

Well, it went downhill from there. They didn't happen to have a map of the development, so we couldn't really tell where "our lot" would be, but we could pick it ou when we took our guided tour.

All they really wanted right now was a deposit "almost any amount will do," and our signature that promised we would begin making payments every month.

All we were willing to promise was that we would think it over. It didn't seem to make them any happier when I offered to pay for our two dinners.

Football season gets early start

A new professional football season officially starts at 7:30 p.m. this Saturday, July 21, when the Lake County Rifles host the Manitowoc Chiefs.

The game will be played in Carmel Field on highways 176 and 63 in Mundelein. The 7:30 p.m. game time has been moved up from past years because fans said they would bring children if the games began and ended earlier.

Lake County last season won eight games and lost two to win the Southern division championship of the Central States Football League. One victory was by a 7 - 3 margin over Manitowoc which ended the season with 6 wins and 4 defeats.

A portion of the proceeds from the game Saturday will go to United Way of Lake County, which has a $795,000 fund raising goal for this year. Half the admission price will be donated to United Way for each coupon being distributed by United Way in Waukegan and by many businesses and industries when turned in at the Rifles box office.

The game this Saturday will be a battle between the best defense and the best offense in the league last year and it also will be a personal contest for many of the participants.

It will pit the running of Lake County's Clifford Boyd, the rookie of the year in the league, against Manitowoc's Jesse Kaye, a quarterback who was named the offensive player of the year in the CSFL.

Boyd, who did not break into the starting lineup until mid-season, gained 530 yards in 88 carries. Kaye in 1972 threw 16 touchdown passes and gained 1,958 yards on 248 passing attempts of which 122 were completed.

Kaye, however, will be matched by Robert "The Red Baron" Berezowitz who is trying for a comeback after leaving the league last year shortly after the Rifles acquired him in a trade with Delavan for 26 players.

Berezowitz, 30, holds every record in the Central States Football League for pass completions, yards gained by passing, pass attempts and touchdown passes, both for single games and for an entire season. He also holds the additional honor of being second, third or fourth in each department.

He will throw to ends O. J. Owens from Northwestern, Bill Trapp from Notre Dame, Ray Carskie of Missouri Valley and several other ends trying to make the team this season.

While Berezowitz plans to throw to the excellent group of ends assembled by coach Bob Franz, he may have some problems because masterminding a defense against him will be Marty Crowe, the Manitowoc head coach who last season was named the outstanding coach in the league.

Last year the Rifles had the best defense by far, allowing only 1,722 yards in 10 games. Except for Tony Bertuca, an all league defensive back and Mel Easely now with Edmonton, most of last year's defense is returning. Bruce Swanson and Chuck Burgoon also made the all-league defensive team.

Manitowoc had the second best offense in the league with 3,100 yards gained. In addition to Kaye, ends Chris Church and Tom Lange made the all-league offensive team.

Lake County did not land a player on the all-star offensive team and Manitowoc failed to have one player on the 11-man defensive squad.

Two rookies new to the Rifles camp given a good opportunity to make the squad are William F. Bulloch II, a guard from Tewksbury, Mass., who for two years was captain of his Plymouth State College team, and Gary Lee Butler, a fullback from Wichita State.

RETURNING VET Mike Rossman fires the ball in from his outfield position. Rossman is making his second appearance in the state Babe Ruth tourney for the Irving Lake All-Stars.

Prospect, Meadows, Hersey earn wins

Tom Culkar had led off with a single, Greg Pfaff reached when his bunt was bobbled, and a wild pitch advanced the runners.

Addison Trail's tallies in the opening frame came after the leadoff man was safe on an error and stole second, a single scored one run, and another steal and base hit were good for another.

HERSEY RALLIES FOR DECISION

Crystal Lake committed five errors in the seventh inning, permitting Hersey to score four runs and post a come-from-behind 5-2 victory.

With the score at 2-1 in Crystal Lake's favor, Dave Mnichowicz led off the seventh with a walk and went to second on a passed ball. Then the errors began. Art Hoesterey tried to sacrifice, but it went as a single and an error when the pitcher threw the ball away at first, Mnichowicz scoring.

Then Dave Carey laid down a bunt and the pitcher threw it away trying to nail Hoesterey at third. Hoesterey tallied. The Huskies tried a squeeze bunt by Don Bianchi and again the pitcher erred on the throw with Carey scoring.

Hersey scored for the last time when Tom Vetta singled to left and an error by the third baseman on a relay throw to the plate gave the Huskies their final run.

Hersey had scored once in the second on Hoesterey's walk and stolen base, Carey's single and Paul Krause's sacrifice fly.

Bob Huber went the distance for Hersey and scattered seven hits in picking up the win.

GRENADIERS BLANKED

Steve Sheridan's five-hit pitching was fruitless as his Elk Grove teammates went down to a 3-0 defeat against Maine South.

Maine South took advantage of five walks and a wild pitch to post one run in the first and two in the fifth, and that was all they needed.

The Grenadiers had only four singles — by Scott Scholten, David Millner, Paul Gulliksen and David Ray. They never really threatened as no Elk Grove runner advanced beyond second base.

Dinner to honor All-Star's McKay

John McKay, director of athletics and head football coach at the University of Southern California, will be the honored guest at a scholarship fund raising reception and dinner sponsored by USC's Midwest Alumni Club this Saturday, at Evanston's Orrington Hotel.

A no-host cocktail party will begin at 6:30 p.m. with dinner to follow at 7:30.

"This will be an informal program providing USC alumni, parents, and friends of the University the opportunity to greet Coach McKay and members of his staff," according to Glenn E. Ronk of Lake Forest, alumni club president and official host for the McKay event.

NCAA Football Coach of the Year, McKay is also currently serving as president of the American Football Coaches Association. He has twice been named Coach of the Year by both the association he now heads and by the Football Writers Association of America.

Heading the committee in charge of the McKay reception and dinner is William R. Patton of Glen Ellyn. Members of his committee are the Messrs. and Mmes. Andrew Wilson, Aurora; William D. Moore, Jr., Chicago; Donald Spyrison, Palatine, and Richard Williams, Lisle, together with Mrs. Melinda A. Patton, Glen Ellyn; Miss Cindy Allison, Hinsdale; George Halas, Jr., Mount Prospect, Stuart Zanville, Chicago, and George Moody, Rolling Meadows.

Reservations for the McKay dinner may be made by mailing checks at $10 per person to Andrew Wilson, Old Second National Bank, Aurora 60504. Checks should be made payable to the USC Midwest Alumni Club.

Family Services Open shaping up real well

The Child and Family Services Open, a Ladies Professional Golf Assn. event at Midlane Country Club Aug. 9-12, could be one of the top events of the year.

All of the top 10 players on the LPGA circuit have announced their intentions to vie for the champion's trophy. Among those of the top ten entered is the new 1973 LPGA Champion, Mary Mills.

Mary had previously won the LPGA Championship in 1964 and prior to that the U.S. Women's Open in 1963. At that point experets were saying Mary had the potential to be one of the all-time greats. Blessed with a fludi natural swing, envied by men and women professionals alike, there seemed to be no way she could be stopped from a lucrative career at the top of women's golf.

But nothing close to what was predicted came true. She won tournaments, but only four in a nine-year span. This, of course, is an enviable record to many aspiring proettes. However, Mary's fans and knowledgeable colleagues did not think so.

What happened? May explains it this way: "I was trying to find myself . . . I was maturing, even thought about giving up golf and going into art, but I decided that golf was a better way of life."

Another problem that has kept Mary from the winner's circle and from playing a course that had a hard terrain was the ligaments in her left hand. Surgery a year ago has restored the full use of her wrist. "It's the first time in years that I wasn't afraid to really go after the ball," she said after her LPGA victory.

It is quite possible that this more mature and healthy Mary Mills could finally be ready to make those nine-year-old predictions come true. She has won more money in 13 tournaments this year than she had ever won in any single season. In fact, she is almost $15,000 ahead. Quite possibly Mary has truly found herself, and art's loss is golf's gain.

Three-way race now developing

Teams No. 1, 10 and 8 are waging a close battle for the top spot in the Arlington Friday Night Golf League.

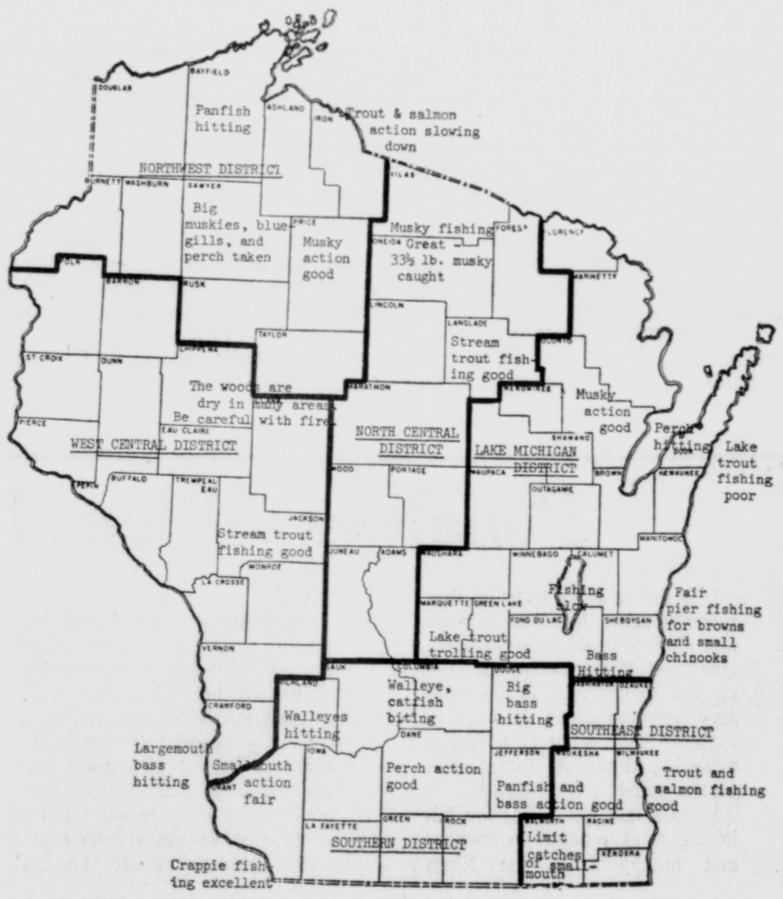

Team No. 1 is at 46 points with No. 10 at 45 and No. 8 at 43. Haas Gallmeier picked up both low gross (37) and low net (31) accolades last week.

The 14th hole was easy prey for birdiers as Stan Faron, Jerry Hoffman, Walt Watts, Jack Erlander, Al Steingraber and Dan Lynn all notched birds. Jim O'Connor and Aldo Damiani birdied the 17th and Tolo Silva (No. 12) and John Hernandez (No. 11) rounded out those who recorded birdies.

Bruins lose to Danans again, finish 2nd

For the second consecutive week, the Kenny Elevator Bruins softball team reached the finals of a big invitational tournament — and lost to Danans.

The Bruins lost to Pell Lake-based Danans in the finals of the LaCrosse (Wis.) tourney a week ago, then fell 6-5 in 10 innings Sunday in the McHenry Invitational. A home run with one out in the 10th sealed the Bruins' fate.

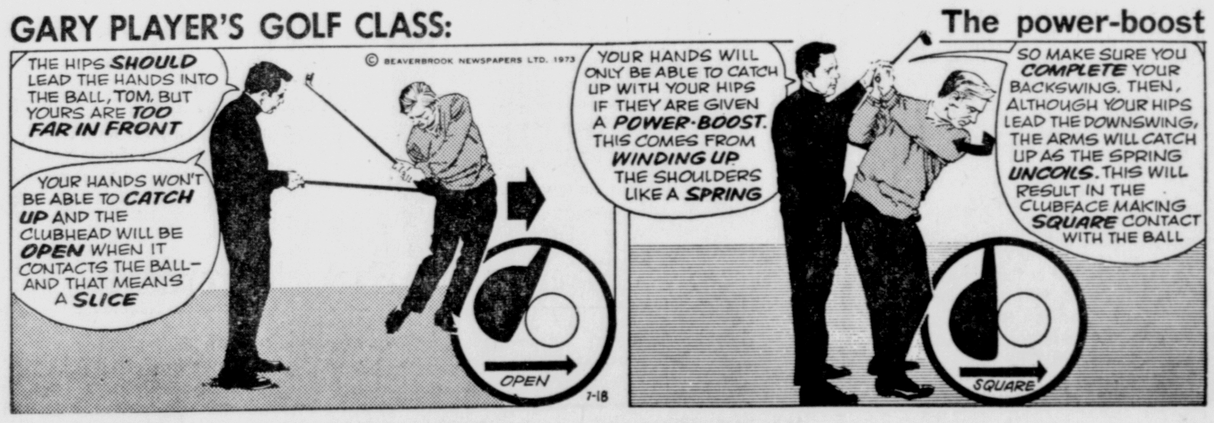

"We don't have any excuses," Bob Campbell, player-coach, said. "We just aren't hitting."

The Bruins beat the Parkview club out of Fox Lake in Saturday's opening game and trounced Ivanhoe 5-3 and the Bavarians 15-12 Sunday before succumbing to Danans.

The second-place finish made the Bruins 38-4 on the season. Third baseman Gil Murtori provided some measure of consolation as he was named the tournament's most valuable player.

The Bruins will compete in the state tournament this weekend in Des Plaines.

4. The Forehand Stroke

The arm is held in a natural position throughout the stroke. It is neither held out stiffly nor is it cramped by the body. It is slightly bent until, at the end of the follow-through, it straightens almost completely. The arm ahould reach for the ball, but with a slight elbow bend.

There is some slight wrist motion in a forehand, for otherwise you would simply "arm" the ball over the net. However, too much wrist motion causes loss of control. The arm should be relaxed, the wrist should be firm.

Position 1. Hold your arm straight in front of you so that wrist and arm form an absolutely straight line;

Position 2. Lay the wrist back slightly;

Position 3. Move the wrist forward again so that wrist and arm are once more in a straight line.

The wrist moves back from Position 1 to Position 2 during the backswing. It stays in Position 2 (firmly) through the hit and through part of the follow-through. It reaches Position 3 at the end of the follow-through.

Forehand Stroke Summary

1. Racket travels upward and backward in a narrow arc as body pivots.

2. Wrist is laid back slightly.

3. Left foot moves toward the ball and left shoulder is turned toward the net.

4. Body moves netward and weight shifts from right foot to left foot.

5. Racket meets ball squarely in front of body.

6. Weight follows through to left foot.

7. Wrist and arm are in a straight line.

Well work on new golf course set to start

THIS IS THE layout of the new 18-hole golf course the Cook County Forest Preserve District is building near Hoffman Estates. Work on the course will start soon with the course scheduled to open next summer.

Work will begin soon on wells at a new $1 million golf course near Hoffman Estates being built by the Cook County Forest Preserve District.

The County Board of Forest Preserve Commissioners yesterday approved awarding a $64,418 contract for the well work to Layne-Western Co. Inc. of Aurora. One of the wells will be for domestic use and the other for irrigation of the course.

The well contract is the first that has been awarded for the course which is now scheduled for completion next summer.

Although the course was originally scheduled for completion early next spring, the open date has been delayed because the forest preserve district received only one bid on the course construction the first time it advertised, district landscape architect Richard Buck said yesterday.

Buck said contracts for the earth work are slated to be awarded soon.

THE 18-HOLE championship course will be built on approximately 200 acres of land within a larger tract bounded by Algonquin, Roselle, Central and Ela roads, just north of the Northwest Tollway.

The par-72 course is being built on part of a 1,700-acre forest preserve known as Paul Douglas Woods.

The new public course will be the only forest preserve district course in the north or Northwest suburbs. Currently the district's closest course for northwest suburban residents is the Chick Evans course in Morton Grove.

Plans for the new course include a practice driving range, pro shop and refreshment area.

In other action yesterday the forest preserve commissioners approved a resolution allowing the use of forest preserve land for the widening of Algonquin Road from Roselle Road west to Freeman Road in southwestern Palatine Township.

Buck said that the forest preserve district will receive an adjacent piece of land from the state to make up for the acreage which will be lost in the road widening work.

Medicare beneficiaries' coverage extended to chiropractic services

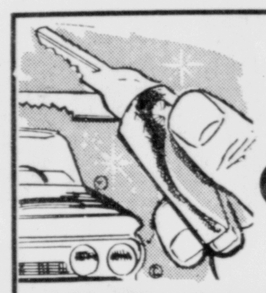

Medicare can now help pay for limited chiropractor's services under Medical Insurance but only under certain conditions, according to Norman R. Thoresen, manager of the Arlington Heights Social Security Office. Thoresen pointed out that the chiropractic must be licensed or legally authorized to furnish chiropractic services by the state and also meet federal standards in order to qualify for payments of eligible services by Medicare.

"We want to emphasize that coverage of chiropractor's services under Medicere is very limited. It is important for beneficiaries to know that Medicare can help pay only for manual manipulation of the spine for the purpose of correcting a subluxation which can be demonstrated by X-ray. No payment can be made for any other kind of chiropractic treatment or for any diagnostic services by the chiropractor, such as X-rays or laboratory tests," Thoresen explained. A subluxation is defined as an incomplete dislocation, off-centering, misalignment, fixation or abnormal spacing of the vertebrae.

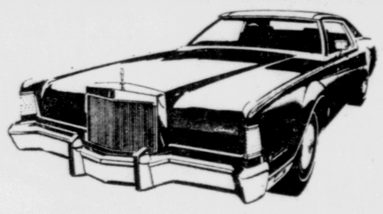

Beneficiaries with any questions about chiropractic coverage should get in touch with their social security office.

Last year, all John Benson saved was $54.32.

This year, he joined the Payroll Savings Plan.

Poor John. Money just seemed to slip right through his fingers. Every time he planned to stash something away, there wasn't anything left.

Then John decided to join the Payroll Savings Plan where he works. Now, an amount he specifies is automatically set aside from his check before he gets it. And invested in U.S. Savings Bonds.

Because John has become such a systematic saver, he's almost forgotten about it. When he gets around to remembering, he's going to have quite a nest egg laid away.

And now there's a bonus interest rate on all U.S. Savings Bonds—for E Bonds, 5½% when held to maturity of 5 years, 10 months (4% the first year). That extra ½%, payable as a bonus at maturity, applies to all Bonds issued since June 1, 1970 . . . with a comparable improvement for all older Bonds.

If you keep forgetting to save something out of your check, join the Payroll Savings Plan and let somebody else do the remembering for you.

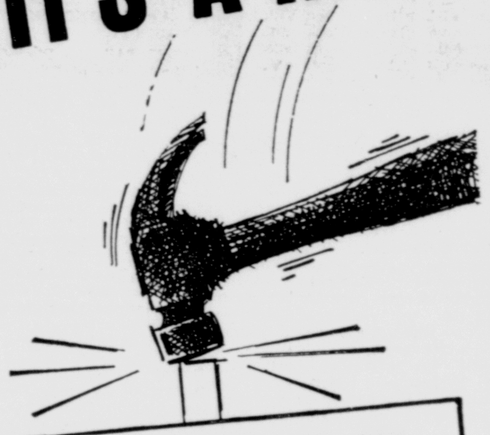

Bonds are safe. If lost, stolen, or destroyed, we replace them. When needed, they can be cashed at your bank. Tax may be deferred until redemption. And always remember, Bonds are a proud way to save.

Take stock in America.
Now Bonds pay a bonus at maturity.
